

Another reason for declining support for the FTA is the belief that Canada has lost more disputes under the agreement than it has won. As Table 34 indicates, three-quarters (75%) of those surveyed believe that Canada has lost more trade disputes since the free trade agreement went into effect. Importantly, 73% of those who think Canada has lost more disputes under the FTA believe it is due directly to the agreement.

Table 34

Has Canada Won or Lost More Trade Disputes Under FTA?

