

The Girl of the Golden Gate

where he had been carried from the lounge to a chair against the taffrail.

“To love and to live,” whispered Emily, pressing the hand which she held in hers against her heart. “Isn’t life beautiful?”

“We are but coming through its gate, darling,” he answered.

THE END