Mr. Ahrens has an even greater reputation in the art centres of Europe than in America, but the war has had its effect on art as on much else, and projected exhibitions in Antwerp and elsewhere have been necessarily interdicted. Mr. Ahrens has established himself in re-cent years as a painter of trees, and as a student of forest life the next generation will regard him as one of the greatest of our day. He should illustrate, as so well he might, Maurice Hewlett's "Lore of Prosperpine." The dignity, not to say majesty, of such "Forest Monarchs" as in No. 7, or "The Veterams" in No. 8, could not be rendered with out deep and direct sympathy with the life evolving in these giants, and it is not difficult to associate the idea of individual life with such huge entities. "The Veterans" might be called "Mystery Wood" as well as No. 5, for these three great lords of the forest stand out from the crowded background as warriors who have wrestled with storm and the years on their own field and stood fast. They are living things with their own aims and consciousness. In "Sun-set After Sorm," the pink and pur-plish tinge suffuses the whole sky, the dying rose and yellow of the far west glowing in the darkening mystery. In No. 14, "The Rising Moon," two great trees bar the light which is diffused thru the rest of the picture with exquisite softness. In "Morning Mists," No. 13, the cold rays of morning begin to be softened and the ghostly atmosphere carries the warm suggest tion of waking life. It is another at-mospheric achievement. The autumn haze of No. 15, "Autumn Tints," is equally notable, the rich tints throw ing into relief the fine tree that stands out from the bush. Two other beautiful pictures are "Early Autumn" (9) and "Midsummer" (10). The former has perhaps the most glowing color of any in the collection, brilliant sunshine dappling the woodland, while a few well-disposed figures provide points of high color, and the deep sky behind glows with warmth. In "Midsummer" the glowing color is subdued by the dusk of the forest, yielding once more an indefinable but exquisite atmospheric effect, which is distinct from the loveeffect, which is distinct from the lovely glimpse of the vista beyond. "June"

(2) is another delightful color composition; with flowers in the foreground, the green in the distant sky brightening into blue above the clouds. brightening into blue above the clouds. No. 3, "Laurentian Woods" is a land-scape on the edge of the bush, with a gleam of blue sky in the distance, and "On the Georgian Bay" (1), the small-metery.

est picture of the exhibition, is a retty sketch of northern lake scenery viewed thru a screen of the woods.

In all these pictures the subtle sympathy of the artist with the varying phases of nature, and the profound grasp of tree life and consciousness are conspicuous. These things are re-corded on canvas with such delicate sense of color values, such control of atmospheric effect, and such admirable grouping and fidelity to the living world, that it is not surprising Mr. Ahrens' work is being accorded the highest rank.

RATS IN THE TRENCHES KEEP SOLDIERS BUSY

Good Fun for Men and Dog While German Shells Burst Overhead.

According to the statement of Lance-Corp. P. Kirby, No. 1 Tunneling Company, C.E.F., somewhere in France hunting the Huns is sometimes varied by hunting for rats in the trenches. The following is an interesting extract from a letter recently received by a friend in Earlscourt:

"Going out from my dugout on March I I happened to see a dog scratching at something. I went over to investigate and found a rat hole. I called some of the boys and the fun started. Armed with picks, shovels and sticks about ten of us started to dig when out came a big rat which the dog immediately grabbed and that was the end of the rodent. We had nothing to do so we decided to search for more. The dog was a big Irish retriever and, believe me, he was some dog. Every time we saw a rat the boys got so excited they started to yell and shout, and the fun was great pulling down sand bags and getting hooked on barbed wire. It was the greatest time I had since I left England. We had one bit of trouble and that was when we found a nest of young ones and the old rat fought the dog and aung on to his nose. I thought Fritz would have heard our yell a mile away. Well our catch was twenty rats and the best fun of the season. All this happened in the third support trenches and while shells from our guns and from the Germans flying around, but this never bothers us." following is an interesting extract from

At the time of the fam-ous California "gold rush" in 1849, Mr. Wales was one of the first to join in the trek overland, but later returned to Markham, where, in company with the late H. R. LETTER CARRIERS ENTER A PROTEST

Object to Stopping of Field Allowance From Soldiers' Postal Pay.

WANT THEIR INCREASES

Say Regular Wage Advances

Should Be Given Men Now Fighting. Branch No. 1 of the Federated Asso ciation of Letter Carriers has sent the following letter of protest to the postmaster-general at Ottawa: Hon Sir,-We wish to call to your attention two matters which, in humble opinion, are a great injustice to men of your department who are willing to enlist in this hour of our country's need and for a time give up their berth in the department service and take all the risks and discomforts of a soldier's life in war. We refer first to the order stopping which a soldier draws, not as pay, bu for the purpose of keeping up and such other charges as barber, laundry, etc. It is certainly very small to deduct that 10 cents per day. And again in the matter of statu tory increases, the man feels it his duty to accept the conditions of service; he enlists-we will say he is receiving $2.25 per day. He goes to the front and has the good fortune to return at the end of three years. He finds the slacker who he has helped keep in a safe job drawing the maximum pay, while he who is lauded as ORGANIZE NEW CLUB a hero has to start again where he left off. We appeal to you, honorable sir, is that right? And again, if he is married, his wife gets no separation al owance. It works out this way (taking the man at $2.25 per day) his P. O.

Balance which he assigns his wife 302.75 50 per cent of his military pay he must assign 200.75

Total which she draws...$503.50 Thus his family are $200.75 short of his income for the year's upkeep; and again if he should be promoted say to B.Q.M.S. or B.S.M. his field allowance of 20 cents per day would mean a fur-ther deduction of $36.50 per year. We understand that the P. O. dept. does not stop off the separation allow ance, but we hold that the P. O. dept. should see that the militia department deal as fairly with the P. O. employes as it does with the provincial, munici pal or private employe. Trusting, honorable sir, that this matter will receive more than serious consideration, we remain, Your obedient servant.
