Predict an Early Boom in Gold Company Shares

Homer L. Gibson & Company in a circular say: Since 1914, when the great world war began, gold mining companies have worked under very adverse conditions. The price of their product---fine gold---has remained fixed at $20.67 per ounce. On the other hand, the cost of materials used in mining gold has risen materially. Labor, too, in spite of increased wages, has been not only scarce, but indifferent. This condition has prevailed practically throughout the world. As a result the production of new gold has fallen considerably short of meeting the demand for use in the arts alone, to say nothing of that required for coinage purposes.

As an example, $58,500,000 represented the value of all the gold produced in the United States last year; $30,000,000 was used commercially---$21,500,000 more than was produced. The same ratio applied practically throughout the world. Where is the gold for coinage purposes to be obtained? This question is now occupying the attention of financial authorities and lawmakers of those great nations which maintain the gold standard as a basis for their money issues.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW

Toronto reports to Bradstreet's say that the more reasonable weather which has prevailed recently has had a beneficial effect on the wholesale drygoods trade, and there is a slightly improved tone in business. Cancellations are fewer, and, if the weather keeps good, there will be further improvement noted no doubt. Prices are still holding as firm as ever, with little to indicate a decline, and the mills are still holding in their deliveries. In the grocery markets, the principal feature this week has been an advance in the price of granulated sugar. At the moment of writing, three refineries have advanced prices 2c per pound, and it is expected that the others will follow in a very short time. In the hardware trade, supplies of steel products are tight, and difficulty is experienced in filling orders for these. Deliveries of some lines of heavy steel, however, are reported to be increasing. The demand for ready-made clothing is dull, and some factories are reported to be suffering considerably from lack of work. In this way the production of gold will be stimulated a little because it will become possible for low grade mines to operate, while those at present producing will of course increase their output.

A SONG AT SUNSET.

A lone thrush sings as the night begins.
A rich wild song as the darkness falls;
And a mystic peace creeps over the world,
Over the starry halls.
So may I sing on the edge of death,
When the dark descends and the hours depart;
So may the mystic peace creep down
Over my weary heart.
---By Edwin Markham.
