All fishes are avoiding foes by every futile means; the salted codfish briskly goes, pursuing canned sardines. I sense an endless tragedy where'er the breakers boom, the thrilling epic of the sea, that tells of death and doom. And if I bade the warfare cease, I'd simply waste my breath; in vain I'd preach a balmy peace to those whose trade is death. Until the end of stars and suns the hungry fish will slay; the big will until the end of stars and stow the same away. The sharks would look chase the little ones, and stow the same away. The sharks would look on me with mirth, or bid me amble hence, just as the people do on earth, when I talk peace and sense. The Democratic convention makes no pronouncement on prohibition. The prohibition law and the Volstead Act for its rigid enforcement are accepted as the law of the land, requiring no alteration. The convention stands firmly for the League of Nations, without reservations that would weaken it. Recognition of the Irish republic is refused. A tariff for revenue plank is inserted in the platical structure while his viands were very few.
