All sights and sounds enchain the will building, King Square, is rapidly nearing To dream that here time's standing completion. Poyas & Co. moved into their remodelled premises yesterday and the bright windows, glowing with light last evening, added no little to the im-

The memories of its sunny glow Fill me with gladness, its delight With restful slumber crowns the night And as I dream each haunting care Drops from me in its fragrant air, The box trimmed walks, the formal bed, The incense of that summer night It thrills me yet with keen delight.

The dark laburnam overhead, The incense of that summer night It thrills me yet with keen delight.

The windows are illuminated with three large electric bulbs in each, and the whole store is bright and cheerful looking. Silent salesmen and show cases were installed yesterday and most people can hardly believe the store to be the same that was so badly damaged the same that was so badly damaged by water and smoke a couple of months ago. Mr. Poyas is to be congratulated on being able to occupy his new store in time for Christmas trade.

"So this is your famous Beacon street," said Major X., as he strolled with his friend along past the State House. "Frankly, I'm surprised. I had always heard that it was a very exclusive street, you know."

"Well, so it is," said the other man.

"Eh! old chap, how can you say so?

Why, it positively verges on the Common."
