According to the city school census the population of Chicago is 2,881,790. This is an increase of 200,000 over the figures shown in the government census of 1910.

The cornerstone of the first Young Men's Christian Association building for the colored race, to be built in Chicago on the north-west, was laid recently in Chicago.

The American golfer has a reputation for truthfulness of speech which easily sur- passes that of any other English link, and for an excellent subject for mirth in the comic papers. Here is one example: "Dibble is playing golf for his health."

"Any improvement?" "His health is better but his language is worse."

LA MARQUISE de FONTENAY

Statesman Who Became a Jesuit Priest—Another Added to the "Cowboy Peers"

(Copyright, 1912, by the Brentwood Company)

Prince Andrew Gagarine, who is now in New York attending the International Congress of Engineers, members of which are to visit the principal cities of the United States before returning home to St. Petersburg, is married to Princess Marie Oboleznska, and bears a name which is familiar through the ecclesiastical activity of his grand-uncle, Prince Ivan Sergevitch Gagarine. The latter while secretary of the Russian Embassy in Paris in 1848, became a convert to Catholicism, which cost him not only his diplomatic position but incurred exile from his native land. Entering the Jesuit Order, he went to the United States and engaged in missionary work among the mining and iron-working population of Pennsylvania, where the fame of Father Gagarine, endured to this day.

Near a quarter of a century of his career as a priest was passed in the United States. Another Gagarine, Alexander by name, was one of the principal Russian commanders in the Crimean war, and died as Governor of Transcaucasia. A cousin of the present visitor, namely, Prince Gregory Gagarine, is vice-president of the Imperial Academy of Arts at St. Petersburg.

The Gagarine are a very numerous family, and are to be found in all ranks and conditions of life, this being due to the fact that all the children of every Gagarine have a right to the princely title. There was a Princess Gagarine who rode "haute école" in a circus, while one Prince Gagarine was earning his living as a hackman in Moscow. Another was employed as a longshoreman on the docks at Odessa.

Still another Prince Gagarine, formerly played a peculiar role in Egypt. Her first husband, a Russian diplomat, kineman of the present Russian ambassador in London, met with his death while shooting in the vicinity of Cairo. His only companion at the time was an Austrian-Italian adventurer, who had served (with an unpleasant record) under Maximilian in Mexico, and had afterwards managed in some way to become attached to the service of the Khedive Ismail. The death of the count was ascribed to an accidental discharge of his own gun. After a decent interval, his widow, who was living in the vicinity of Cairo, died of the same cause. She was a confidante of the Khedive and princesses; first of the wife and mother-in-law of the Khedive Ismail, and later of the late Khedive Tewfik.

In those days Russia was the reverse of England, and through the Khedival princesses, the clever Russian woman was able not only to procure information for the authorities at St. Petersburg, but likewise to stir up a great deal of trouble for the British.

It is interesting to note that the late Lord Grey de Ruthyn, like his brother before him, takes a special pride in the precedence of his own father, and it is because his ancient barony, created by King Edward III. in 1284, is hereditary on the female line, and comes to him, as to his elder brother, through his mother, Lady Bertha, the youngest daughter of the second Marquis of Hastings, and sister of the third and last marquis, who was also Lord Grey de Ruthyn. When the late marquis, so well known for his enormous losses on the turf, died in the late sixties his marquisate became extinct, while his barony went to his sister, Lady Bertha, wife of Augustus Clifton, and the mother of the new peer.

In like manner the barony of Ruthyn has twice already passed to other families by marriage; as it has been held in turn by the Yalvertons, and the Goolds of Woodham-Manstead, before coming to the Plantagenet marquesses of Hastings, and now to the Cliftons. It was originally created in favor of Roger Grey, a young son of the Lord Grey de Ruthyn, and his holders figured conspicuously in the reign of Edward III., Richard II., Henry V., and Henry VII., while the ninth Lord Grey de Ruthyn, who was also Earl of Kent, was one of the judges of Mary Queen of Scots, and as such pronounced upon her the sentence of death.

The sixteenth Lord Grey de Ruthyn was earl marshal at the coronation of George II., and the late lord carried the golden spear at Edward VII's coronation, though without having first to overcome the rival claim of his kinsman, Earl of London. The court of claims had so much difficulty before eventually deciding in Lord Grey's favor, that King Edward suggested that the two claimants should toss up for the privilege.

The use of these spears, which are known as the spears of St. George, at coronations, dates from the reign of King Edward the Confessor. After being duly consecrated together with the other coronation insignia, they are taken from the altar by the Dean of Westminster and handed to the lord great chamberlain, who, down to the reign of William IV. fitted them to the sovereign's feet, but since then merely touches the royal feet with their points, as a sign to the people that the king is the foremost knight of his realm.

The Lords Grey de Ruthyn have the right to a quaint adjunct to the livery of their servants, which is a "maunch" or lower black velvet sleeve worn always by the indoor footmen, and by the coachmen and carriage footmen when the state equipage is used. It gives a great cachet to the livery. Its use dates from the reign of Richard II., who bestowed this ques-

The Tie That Binds

By RUTH GAMBERON

If your only hold on some thing you loved very, very much were a slender chain, and if you were afraid the chain was getting too weak to hold, and if you knew that you would lose this precious thing, together if the chain broke, would you give the chain a tremendously hard yank to see if that would break it?

Or would you try to find some way of strengthening the chain? That sounds as if the answer were obvious, doesn't it? And, yet, listen to this question from a letter friend:

"I have a young man whom I do not care for me as much as he used to," she writes, "and that he is growing altogether too fond of."

In other words, do I think she should give the tie that binds this man to her a tremendously hard yank to see if it would break? No, Madame, I don't. For this reason—if you did that and the tie didn't break—it probably wouldn't be weakened by such treatment, and whether your husband cares for the girl or not, that is likely to irritate and estrange her.

There are two or three things which you can do, according to your strength. The best and hardest is to try to strengthen that tie in every way you know how, and then, if you still must, make some sane use of force.

But if the torture you are suffering is too keen for you to take such a walk among your own feelings, the second best thing to do is to have a friendly talk with your husband. In all probability the terms chamber which you have built up for yourself has its foundation merely on a few thoughtless words or acts of your husband, and is constructed out of your own imaginations. Doubtless it is so unsubstantial that a few words from him will blow it all to smithereens. And if you approach him in the right way and appeal to his tenderness, he will probably say those few words which would weaken it for ever.

Sometimes, you know, an atmosphere of constant jealousy and "suspicion" will produce the very effect which you want.

By the way, if you want help in convincing yourself of the groundlessness of your suspicions, suppose you read the greatest thing that was ever written on this subject. It is in other words, glance over your Othello.

It may really help you to realize how foolish you probably are.

GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Gray and Faded Hair to Its Natural Color

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage" tea from the leaves of the sage plant, and used it for their hair and for the hair of their children. This preparation is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is very superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

The growth and beauty of the hair depends on a healthy condition of the scalp. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly kills the dandruff germs which rob the hair of its life, color and lustre, makes the scalp clean and healthy, gives the hair strength, color and beauty, and makes it easy to comb.

TORONTO SEES HYDROPLANES

SPEED 32 MILES AN HOUR

(Toronto World)

With the speed of torpedoes hurled from the battleship's side, two flying hydroplanes roared out of the mist, flinging walls of water from them as they hurtled into sight of the crowds on the exhibition seawall. It was the first time hydroplanes had engaged in combat in Toronto, and the throngs shouted their welcome as the two meteoric spots grew larger in the gray mist and then suddenly broke into white, long streams of fog and vapor tearing behind them and aft a steaming boiling mass of water.

Over the oncoming course with a flying start the two boats made 32 miles an hour. It was the fastest hydroplane race ever held in the world. The local boat had not half a length on it; another 100 feet more of going and Governor's boat would have lost.

Upton, near Peterborough, one of the smallest parishes in England, numbering only fourteen houses, possesses a combination of black marble, which becomes damp in patches wherever rain is about to fall. It is regarded in the village as an infallible barometer. This tonstone is, presumably, the English equivalent to the weathering chert at Amiens Cathedral.

Daily Hints For the Cook

BROWN SAUCE
Two tablespoons butter, 1/2 slice onion, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 cup brown stock, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Cook onion in butter until slightly browned, remove onion and stir butter constantly until well browned. Add flour mixed with seasonings and brown butter and flour; then add stock gradually.

TEA ROLLS
One and one-half pints of bread flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon of butter and 2 teaspoons of baking powder. Mix it together with the hands (as you would for pie crust) and add cold milk enough to make a soft dough. Roll out about half an inch thick, cut out with a round cookie cutter, brush over with melted butter and fold over like Parker House rolls. Let stand about 15 minutes and bake in a hot oven.

THEIR HONEYMOON IN AIRSHIP

Trip From New York to Portland, Me., in New York's Plan

BORDEN SLATED TO OPEN HALIFAX FAIR

Halifax, Sept. 5.—(Special)—Hon. R. L. Borden is expected in Halifax on September 11 to open the Nova Scotia Exhibition. The banquet at Ottawa on Monday evening will make it necessary for the premier to take very little rest after that function if he is to be in Halifax on Wednesday.

THE PRICE OF EGGS
A table of prices of eggs since 1900, issued by the U. S. agricultural department, shows how steady has been the rise. In 1907 there was an artificial rise, probably on account of the panic, which was corrected by a drop in prices the following year. In spite of a few minor fluctuations, however, the table shows a steady increase:

Year	Price	Year	Price
1900	12 29	1907	13 31
1901	12 31	1908	13 37
1902	13 31	1909	15 45
1903	15 45	1910	16 47
1904	16 47	1911	18 45
1905	18 45	1912	18 45

FOR DANDRUFF, FALLING HAIR OR ITCHY SCALP--25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Save Your Hair! Danderine Destroys Dandruff and Stops Falling Hair at Once—Grows Hair, We Prove It

If you care for heavy hair, that glimmers with beauty and is radiant with life, you will find that Danderine is what you need. It has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous you must use Danderine, because nothing else accomplishes so much for the hair.

Just one application of Knowlton's Danderine will double the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scrub robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots become faint, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, don't hesitate. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will see this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp, no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually why not now? A 25 cent bottle will truly amaze you.
