PREACHER IN STOCKS. Philadelphia Record-Herald.

The strange sight was seen recently of the rector of a Lincolnshire, Eng., parish sitting in the stocks. This reversion to the ancient form of punishment was not due to any offence committed by the clergyman, but to a local custom dating be obviated by undergoing Rather than pay, the rector of Corby, accompanied by the church warden and chairfeet in the stocks. Sir J. B. underwent the same experience.

The much-abused secular press has filled its columns for a fortnight with reports of the various church courts such as no religious paper would think of giving. The publicity given the discussions was of great value to the different denominations. During June the births registered were tussion we doubt if the services it has rendered will be kept in mind by the A lengthy discussion of the increases against it. The secular rese does more a salaries for firemen in the employ of than its share in disseminating the news the city took place at the meeting of the city council on Monday evening. After ways for good the clergy who lose their a long debate, increases averaging 10 per tempers and make injudiclous remarks are

DEFINING THE BROAD CHURCH.

The Dean. A latitudinarian Dean, whose thirst for with information makes him the dread of the society in which he moves, recently cate thised one of the Stamese Princes about the religion of Stam. The Prince replied that it was Buddhist.
"Yes," replied the Dean, "I know that Buddhism is the religion of the common people. But what is the religion of the upper and educated classes?"

"Ah!" replied the Prince, with an engaging smile, "we are what you call Broad Church. We profess to believe, but do not." The catechism was brought to an abrupt
