confirmation of the small boy's state-ment. Danny advanced toward him with a scowling face. That face seemed strange without the smile that usually doubled in with sunshine. Danny doubled up his big fist. "Say, Bill, get on that car and go with me to the bottom of the shaft or I'll break every bone in your body !" Bill hesitated, but he could only hesitate for the fraction of a second. There was something in Danny's voice and manner and appearance that fright-ened him. Bill was convinced that Danny meant every word he said. So, sulkily and slowly, he advanced and took his place in the cage. The two men stood there for a moment in the sunshine-the willing and the unsob and bravely waved her hand. She murmured brokenly. "God protect you, Danny, me boy!" No one needed to announce that the prayer came from Danny's mother. The next moment the heads of Danny and Bill disappeared from view. And then the crowd settled down for a long and anxious wait. They stood it all right for a while but then the suspense began to tell on them. The seconds be-came hours and the minutes were etern-ities.

"Hasn't the alarm been given ?" in sent to Cedar Hill the moment the ex-plosion happened." In the meantime a score of persons with pale faces kept their eyes glued on that yawning abyss. Would the men come out alive? To while away the time, two of the bystanders began to discuss the ethics of Dann's action in compeling Bill to go down the theft compelling Bill to go down the shaft. Was it just? Was it— But the dispute was cut short by a wild cheer from the crowd. Danny and Bill had returned, and with them were two other men in a half conneious condition. Danny was panting from his ex-ertions. His face was smeared with coal dust. His hair was tousled and his clothing was torn in many places. He would have made a sorry appearance in a drawing room. The moment they were relieved of their burden the two men started down again. Bill by this time had ceased to sulk and was interested in his work. In an incredibly short time the cage reappeared, and the rescuers laid two more men on the ground. Some one suggested that it would be well to relieve Danny and Bill by having one or two of the men in the crowd take their places. But modesty or reluctance to interfere with Danny and Bill held them back. They started down a third time. One of the spectators, who stood on the fringe of the crowd, ventured an observation:

"You better not run any more risks," Danny. But there's some one there!" "It's only a dago!" persisted the cautious one. Two flashes like lightning shot from Danny's blue eyes. Words rushed to his lips—usually silent. "He's got a soul to save, hasn't he?"

"He's got a soul to save, hasn't he?" Then a smile crossed his face—the smile always followed the bolt of anger with Danny—and he added whimsically: "Besides, he's got a large family to

A few seconds later Danny opened his eyes. The crowd seemed to confuse him. He could not understand the cause of all the excitement. His glance, roaming about, fell on Father Curley. He smiled that whimsical smile of his, and said feebly: are gathered up in that stream ; it is a life current for us ushered in at holy baptism, and we have been kept in it in baptism, and we have been kept in it in the other sacraments, but more than all are we fed with it in enthrety, and are sustained on the way, since we re-ceive not only the precious blood, but receive it whole and entire in the holy Eucharist. THE PRECIOUS BLOOD

FEAST, SUNDAY, JULY 7

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES As the little streams make the great oceans, so the minor devotions and practices of holy Church lead up to the greater ones. So with devotion to the minor saints we are led to devotion to the greatest ones—to St. Joseph and to the Bleesed Virgin, and finally to sanot-ity itself in the lesson of our divine Lord to the other persons of the ador-able Trinity. The devotions of May bring us to those of June, and June to July, and thus we are brought through the whole round of months, finding in each something to eugage us and lead us step by step to the climax in our de-votion and love and homage of God Himself, our first beginning and our last end. Thus as in June we were in-vited to pay special homage and adoraoceans, so the minor devotions practices of holy Church lead up to <text><text><text><text><text><text><text> A more striking evidence of the haing of refinement and culture with last end. Thus as in Jone we were in-vited to pay special homage and adora-tion to our Lord's Sacred Heart, so in July we are asked to supplement that de-votion by special homage and venera-tion of His precious blood. What the Priest is

We recognize the priest as one chosen from among men to serve men in the affairs of God, says Bishop Consty. He is the minister of reconciliation with God, the teacher of the truth, and one who offers the sacrifices, who admin-isters the sacraments, who prays for the
