Test Was Severe. The final test yesterday was a hard one. A three-inch wire nail was hammered into the tire which had been previously put on a touring car, and inflated to a pressure which registered 70 by test, one of the newspaperment taking the pressure test himself. The nail was then withdrawn, leaving what would have been a disastrous puncture in an ordinary tire. In this case, however, there was apparently no loss of air. Then another nail was driven into the tire in another spot. This nail was not withdrawn, but the reporters were taken for a ride through Rosedale and finally out on to Yonge street and north to Bedford Park, then back to the Lumsden Building on the corner of Adelaide and Yonge street.
