LEAVERS THE NEIGHBORHOOD.

A Public Park Not Only Influences Children of the payrounds which the city provides for the children of the poor are usually regarded at excellent things for giving the little folks a good time and keeping them out of mimeted, but few have any idea of the payround the leavens the whole neighborhood, "says Mrs. Caroline A. Crumley, of Hamilton Fish Park, "and the playgrounds of the Fish Park, "and the playground of the free children have never known what freedom was before. Neither have they known what respect for laws was. Order is maintained in the tenement districts only by the presence of the 'cop,' but on the playground the children learn that the laws exist for the god of the community, and obey them, willingly. They learn, in fact, that liberty is not license, and that is the god of the community, and obey them and the payrounds the god of the community, and obey them and the payrounds the god of the community, and obey the most valuable training they could get for American citizen solut get for American citizenship."

In some of the playgrounds there appears to the visitor to be more law than liberty, and there is a painful mechanical payron the payron the payron the correction tried do down the pulpit solution, and how to supervise without checking spontaneity and good behavior are marked by all conters. The children regulate their own play to a great extent. During the crowded hours there is a laways a girl in charge of each swing, or "teeter-saw," and in return for counting the swings that each girl takes and directing her to vacate in favor of the next girl in line at the end of the prescribed number she is allowed to, have one turn in every twenty-five herself. This works very well, as a rule, but occasionally a girl succeeds in getting hold of the swing out of her turn. Then there is an appeal to Miss Crumley, but she frequently declines to interfere.

Why did you let her get ahead of you "she asks, after listening to the complaint of the injured party." You should allow complaint of the injured party. "You should stand up for your rights."

This useful lesson the little girl prob-

They had never before had space to set one foot before another, and any sort of rapid progression through the streets theant dodging under horses' heads, avoiding the trolley cars and keeping an meant dodging under norses neads, avoiding the trolley cars and keeping an eye open for the 'cop.' of course, it probably doesn't seem worthy of remark, but to me one of the most gratifying things about the playground is to see the children run.

"They are greatly changed, too, in other respects. When the park was opened they were very excitable, just like wild ducks, and geese. Now they can enjoy their play without getting wild about it, and it is quite wonderful to see them standing in the line waiting for their turn at a swing or a "teeter-saw.'"—From the New York Tribune.

Mrs. Cornwallis West, the London beauty, has written a magazine article in which she says: "It is not to be denied that smoking is much on the increase among women in England, and it is now more or less an accepted fact and is tolerated even in the most old-fashioned houses. There is no doubt that when indulged in moderation its effects are beneficial, particularly to nervous, overstrained or overworked women, and the prejudice against it is bound to disappear."

How to Stamp Letters.

This useful lesson the little girl probably lays to heart, and the next time it is not so easy to get ahead of her.

The playground has had a far-reaching effect upon the neighborhood, and many things have changed since it was opened. It has added much to the interest of the home life in giving the children something to tell their parents when they go home.

"My children never used to talk at home," said one mother. "Now their tongues run all the time."

Afother notable effect is that the children, both boys and girls, get home to their evening meal in time, and show little inclination to run the streets afterward.

"They get so tired and hungry in the playground that they are glad to eat and go to bed," Miss Crumley says. "Of course, they had their play before, but it was different. It excited them and did not make them healthily tired. For instance, they didn't even know how to run when this playground was opened. They had never before had space to set

Bridge.

Bridge.

No game has been dealt with more mercilessiy—tootball perhaps excepted—than "bridge." The pulpit has condemned it as a waste of time physicians have declared that women are ruining their health by their devotion to it, and sociologists are saying that bridge players are in danger of being able to do nothing else, so great is the craze for it.

So intensely does Mrs. Humphrey Ward feel on the subject that in a recent paper sne declared: "Bridge has ruined several fine ladies, brought some extasts into the market, but up many thousand pounds worth of lewels for sale at Christes , separated husbands and wives who rubbed along fairly well before, and destroyed mush friendships."

Now the New York Sun appears with a flatering endorsement of the game, and calls it one peculiarly suited to the American type of mind, saying the gualities essential for success at bridge for precisely those in demand in everyday life, either business or social; that it is a game of judgment combined with speculation, or combination balanced by competition.

It calls it peculiarly a game for intelligent people, since it presents continually interesting and intricate problems more or iess difficult of solution, and that, every bridge player may give conscience to the four winds an pleasure. If it is whetch the faculities for business and for social success, well as a pleasure. If it is whetch the faculities for business and for social success, why not play morning, noon and night? The Indifferent Bridegreem. The absence of all conventionalities and restrictions in Labrador is also very refreshing. When the minister arrived at the island he found all the islanders accombiled in the the minister arrived at the island ne found all the islanders assembled in the little school room awaiting him. It was little school room awaiting him. It was not till he actually entered the building that he discovered the bride was the deceased's wife sister. This being a forbidden relationship, he refused to proceed, whereupon the intending bridegroom quietly remarked: "Never mind, Mister, one of these others will do." So, turning to the expectant crowd he. Mister, one of these others will do." Growth of the English Tongue. (Kansas City Journal.)

(Kansas City Journal.)

To-day over 135,000,000 people speak English. It has displaced French as the language of diplomacy and is now making great headway as the universal language of trade. All North America, South Africa, Liberia, Australia, New Zealand, Samoa, Hawail, most of Polynesia and various small states have permanently adopted our mother tongue, and there is every reason to believe that the 10,000,000 of Filipinos will be using it in the course of time. With the construction of the Panama Canal, Central America also will probably yield to its influences to a large extent.

How Not to Catch Cold.

People are more likely to catch cold in the back than they are generally aware of, and if neglected may prove a serious matter. The back, especially between the snoulders, should always be kept well-covered, and never lean with your back against anything that is cold. Never sit with the back in a direct draught, and when warming it by the fire do not continue to keep the back exposed to the heat after it has become comfortably warm. To do so is debilitating.
