Making Attar of Roses.

Every year in Bulgaria there is an immense harvest of roses in which the people take a good deal of interest. This rose crop, says a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger is the support of one hundred and seventy-three villages and amounts to some twenty-five million pounds of rose flowers. It is for the world's supply of that rare perfume attar of roses.

From all these million pounds of blooms, however, the average yearly distillation of pure attar amounts only to about one hundred and twenty thousand ounces. It takes from one hundred and sixty to two hundred pounds of rose flowers to make one ounce of attar, and there are about three hundred roses to the pound.

The distillation of rose flowers is carried on, during the progress of the harvest, in copper boilers with condensing attachments; the first product of distillation is redistilled into what is known as "second rose water." This double-distilled water is very strong in odor and very turbid in appearance. It is full of tiny, yellow, white, oily globules, and when the long-necked bottles in which the rose water runs are filled they rise to the top. These globules are the real attar of roses. They are skimmed with little conical spoons and put into separate bottles that have little holes in the bottom large enough to let the water run out, but not the oil.

Mike's Share.

The time had come to dole out the day's rations, and in an Irish regiment the quartermaster and his assistant were poring them out in preparation for distribution.

At last, just before the orderly men were due to arrive, the assistant turned to the quartermaster.

With a twinkle in his eye, Mike said: "Av ye please, sorr, there's a loaf short. Who'll I give it to?"

"Keep it yourself, Mike," replied the quartermaster.

Old "Ham and" Disappears.

The high cost of living has separated one of the oldest couples in the country, who have served so faithfully together as to have become a public institution. That one would ever be divorced from the other never entered the brain of man.

However, when it comes to slashing the romance out of life, trust the present-day boarding house, where the question is now being put, "Which will you have—ham or eggs?"

When a man starts on the down grade he always expects his brakes to work.

Repairs on farm machinery ordered now will be on hand when needed in the spring.

Trying to be somebody with all one's might is about the biggest work a human being can engage in.

"A co-operative enterprise is directly dependent for its success upon the loyalty of the members and their interest in the organization. Lack of loyalty and interest on the part of the members has resulted in the downfall of many co-operative associations. Organizations founded upon a real desire of the members are less likely to suffer from lack of allegiance than those which have for their basis misconceptions and prejudice."

Woman's Suit Against Kaiser Cancels Debt.

The Treaty of Versailles has given strange satisfaction to Mme. Prieur of Paris, who two years ago filed in the French courts a charge of murder against the Kaiser because her husband, a French merchant, was drowned when a German submarine sank the steamship Sussex in the English Channel during the war, says a Paris despatch. The Minister of Justice then promised that he would demand Wilhelm's appearance in the courts to answer to the charge, but apparently the action has been shelved.

A French commissioner of police called on Mme. Prieur recently and asked her to acknowledge the accuracy of an account which a German lawyer asserts is due to it by her late husband, despite the fact that the peace treaty provides that persons in France who suffered from the German invasion or other acts of the enemy do not have to pay their obligations to Germans until they are finally indemnified by the Berlin Government. Therefore, Mme. Prieur refused to accept the German claim until the Kaiser appears either before a French, German or Dutch court to answer to the charge she has filed against him.

A MOTHER'S TRIALS

Care of Home and Children Often Causes a Breakdown.

The woman at home, deep in household duties and the cares of motherhood, needs occasional help to keep her in good health. The demands upon a mother's health are many and her children's welfare exact heavy tolls, while hurried meals, broken rest and much indoor living tend to weaken her constitution. No wonder that the woman at home is often indisposed through weakness, headaches, backaches and nervousness. Too many women have grown to accept these visitations as a part of the lot of motherhood. But many and varied as her health troubles are, the cause is simple and relief at hand. When well, it is the woman's good blood that keeps her well; when ill she must make her blood rich to renew her health. The nursing mother more than any other woman in the world needs rich blood and plenty of it. There is one way to get this good blood so necessary to perfect health, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new blood, and through their use thousands of weak, ailing wives and mothers have been made bright, cheerful and strong. If you are ailing, easily tired or depressed, it is a duty you owe yourself and your family to get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. What this medicine has done for others it will surely do for you.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

One of Them.

A fisherman sat in the shadow of a stone wall on the bank of a creek, patiently waiting for a fish to take the bait. Just above a sign on the wall which read "Insane Asylum" sat another man just as patiently watching him. Finally he asked: "Caught anything?"

"No."

"Had any bites?"

"No."

"How long you been fishing?"

"Three or four hours."

"Come on over on this side."

Your Day's Work.

What a satisfaction there is when you leave your work at night, in looking back over the day's work as a superb accomplishment. How you enjoy your unquestioned approval at the end of a perfect day. You can go home with a light heart and say to yourself, "Ah, now I can play. I have done my best to-day. I have left nothing undone or half finished. I have made the most of everything. I haven't been mean, I haven't been unkind, I haven't lost my temper, I haven't shirked my job. I have tried to put efficiency into everything I have done to-day."

This is a day's record which it is a delight to look over, of which to be proud. But when you go home at night feeling mean and contemptible because of a poor day's work, and of failures in all directions that you could have prevented, how different your sensations!

Some people drift into the habit of being half satisfied with a poor day's work. But you can't afford to do this, my friend. The habit of leaving your work at night without having done your best, of turning out, day after day, work that does not meet with your approval, is demoralizing to your character and fatal to your chances of advancement.

Don't be satisfied with anything less than your best. Make it a rule that you will have reason to be proud of your day's work because you have put your best into it, the highest of which you are capable. Don't leave it with flaws; don't compel yourself to go home at night regretting a poor day's work, a botched job. You can't afford it; it will haunt you so that you cannot enjoy your home or your recreation.

Maple Leaf on Unknown Warrior's Coffin.

Just as the body of the "Unknown Warrior" was about to be lowered into the grave in Westminster Abbey a single maple leaf, sent from Canada, was placed upon the coffin.

With its unmatchable shading of red and gold, just as it had fallen from the tree, this simple tribute was the last to be laid over the head of the unknown hero before the grave was filled in with earth removed from the original resting place in France.

The leaf, a particularly beautiful specimen, was gathered by Mr. Adam Brown, the aged Hamilton citizen who recently resigned as postmaster, on the road between Burlington and Wabasso Park. With not the least pretension of the use to which it would be put, Mr. Brown enclosed it in a letter to Miss Alice Home, London, daughter of the late Sir Anthony Home, V.C., of Lucknow fame. This lady has just written of how the leaf became a medium typical of Canada's sincere homage to that host who, fighting, fell, leaving no trace of their identity.

Who is this unnamed hero that lies where England's dead are buried? Nobody knows. But if he be one of Canada's sons, in his last sleep he is close to the emblem of his native land.

Origin of Gun Salute.

The custom of firing artillery comes to us from the time when guns were first used. It was then considered polite and courteous to any great personage who happened to arrive at your castle to load all your guns with shotted rounds—not blank—and to fire them off as he arrived at your threshold. The reason for doing this was to show your trusted guest by emptying all the guns just before he came into their range. This practice was not kept up long. Blank rounds were soon fired instead of real ones. They were not so dangerous!

His Passport.

The scene was the office on a railway station of the Society for the Repatriation of Australian Soldiers, at which certain cheaper or free tickets were issued to bona-fide Australian ex-soldiers.

A man, very stylishly dressed, walked into the office and asked for the special ticket.

"We only issue them to ex-soldiers of the Australian Army," replied the clerk.

"Why," burst forth from the other's lips, "you boast-wallowing, swivel-eyed sea of a rollicking lame sheep, if you feel my buck-jumping, sharp-coughing, wildy whip running, foul of your blinded shoulders, you'll know it's time to pull the carb-bolt on that jaw of yours and then—"

"Give him a ticket—quick!" shouted the manager of the depot. "He's out!"

Graphite for Wire Wheels.

The spoke ends of wire wheels are apt to rust, especially if there is the slightest looseness which permits water to enter. A small quantity of graphite spread over the surface at the spoke ends will prevent this rusting.

BITS OF HUMOR FROM HERE & THERE

Welcome Words.

"Jones is the finest after-dinner speaker I ever heard."

"Indeed!"

"Yes; he always says, 'Waiter, give that bill to me.'"

A Matter of Taste.

"Don't you wish you was a bird, Jimmy, and could fly way up in the sky?" mused little Jean dreamily.

"Naw!" scorned Jimmy. "I'd rather be an elephant and squirt water through my nose."

Angels Got Tired.

The new baby had proved itself the possessor of extraordinary lung power. One day baby's brother, little Johnny, said to his mother:

"Ma, baby came from heaven, didn't he?"

"Yes, dear," answered the mother. Johnny was silent for a minute and then he went on: "I say, ma!"

"What is it, Johnny?"

"I don't blame the angels for slinging him out, do you?"

Very Ill!

Lord Halsbury's ninety-seventh birthday reminds me that he is still sturdy, and can walk into the House of Lords without any assistance other than a stick. To himself, however, his health is not very marvellous.

A friend who met him one day congratulated him on the wonderful way in which he was preserving his strength and on never being ill. "I don't know so much about it," said Lord Halsbury, shaking his head sagely; "I had a bad attack of hic-coughs last week."

Diagnosis.

The telephone rang and the book-keeper answered it.

"Yes, madam, this is Wilkins' market."

"This is Mrs. Blank. I want you to know that the liver you sent me is not satisfactory. It is not calf's liver at all; calf's liver is tender and—"

"What is it?" Wilkins asked.

"The bookkeeper surrendered the phone."

"Mrs. Blank," he said, "liver complaint."

Cantor.

George, three years of age, appeared on the Easter program at his Sunday school in Greenwood, singing a solo. As he was leaving the church with his mother, a friend said to him:

"George, you did fine."

"I know it," he replied.

His mother, reproving him, said: "Why, George, you should not have said that to the lady."

Whereupon George answered: "Well, mother, I guess I could hear my own voice."

Murdering Wagner.

"Excuse me," said the detective, as he presented himself at the door of the music academy, on Christmas Eve, "but I hope you'll give me what information you have, and not make any fuss."

"What do you mean?" was the indignant inquiry.

"Why, that little affair, you know."

"I don't understand."

"Why, you see, we got a tip from the house next door that somebody was murdering Wagner and the chief sent me down here to work on the case."

A Diligent Novice.

Father returned from his first driving lesson boasting of his easy mastery of the new car. To please him, several of his family consented to ride with him and things went well until a car coming up behind them honked its horn.

The startled driver jerked his wheel to the right, running down a steep bank, then to the left, heading into a fence, and to the right again, luckily bringing up in the road.

"Dad, what on earth are you trying to do?" demanded his breathless son.

"Why, son," replied the new driver calmly, "I was just practicing turning out for teams."

There have been rumors of men who have died from overwork; but many cases of death from overeating are very well authenticated.

One of the best known guides in Nova Scotia gives this testimonial of MINARD'S LINIMENT—

Have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my home, hunting and lumber camps for years and consider it the best white liniment on the market. I find that it gives quick relief to minor accidents, such as Sprains, Bruises and all kinds of wounds. Also it is a great remedy for coughs, colds, etc., which one is liable to catch when log driving and cruising during the winter and spring months. I would not be without MINARD'S LINIMENT and cannot recommend it too highly.

The Lesson of the Rabbit.
Talk about output! Listen to this little tale of mass production.

Fifty years ago, there were no rabbits in Australia. Then three rabbits were sent out from London.

Forty years later 25,000,000 frozen rabbits and 96,000,000 rabbit skins were shipped to Europe from Australia.

Nearly all Australian railways are State, or Government, owned.

Why Sands Sing.
The eastern side of Lake Michigan is fringed with sands that sing. One has only to walk on them when they are dry, or thrust a stick into them, to produce a musical sound.

Various explanations of this phenomenon have been put forward. The most plausible is that advanced by Mr. W. D. Richardson, who has noted that the sands do not sing beyond the line reached by driftwood.

There must be some relation between the periodical wetting of the sands and the sounds they emit. It has, therefore, been concluded that the lake water deposits a thin film of salt upon the grains of sand. When the grains are rubbed together the film creates considerable friction. The effect is similar to that of rosin on a violin bow.

Cause of Early Old Age

The celebrated Dr. Michenoff, an authority on early old age, says that it is caused by poisons generated in the intestine. When your stomach digests food properly it is absorbed without forming poisonous matter. Poisons bring on early old age and premature death. 15 to 30 drops of "Cure's Syrup" after meals makes your digestion sound. 10

Surnames and Their Origin

HALLOWELL
Variations—Halliwell, Holliwell. Racial Origin—English. Source—A locality.

Here is a group of family names compounded of a word which we know quite well (the pun being unintentional) and another which some of us know at least, though it is to be feared that we seldom pause on it long enough to realize its meaning. This latter is the word almost now extinct except in prayer. It is "halowed" or "halowed." It is akin to the words "halo" and "holy," being identical in meaning with the latter.

If the spelling of these family names were modernized they would all be "Hollywell."

As has been explained many times in this series, there is a very large class of surnames which originally were descriptive of the places in or near which people lived. They first came into being as mere descriptive phrases, as is indicated by the prefixes which are found with them in the early records. Later, through everyday use, as applied to individuals, people lost the connection as descriptions of place, and the became veritable family "tags." Then, of course, it was most natural that the clumsy prefixes should be dropped in most cases.

Thus the family names of Hallowell, Halliwell and Holliwell are but the descriptive forms as "at the halowed place of the Holy Well." The Middle Ages was in no way a miscellaneous place, with the "cross well," and was so called as a result of the quite widespread custom of erecting little shrines and crucifixes in their vicinity.

CHAPMAN
Racial Origin—Middle English. Source—An occupation.

As far back as the Middle Ages in England they had "rolling stores," and everybody who bears the family name of Chapman stands a pretty good chance of tracing his ancestry back to one of these "rolling retailers" of antiquity. At any rate the name itself is directly traceable to that source.

The "chapman" of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries was not an ordinary tradesman who contented himself with the market at his door. He was a pioneer in trade, the true merchandising expert of his age, who bought his wares in the section where they were plentiful, and therefore cheap, and enhanced their market value and his profits by transporting them to localities where they were in great demand. He did not handle perishable goods. For the most part he handled various forms of hardware.

Nor was he ignorant of the principles of advertising and the value of a "leader" in his offerings to attract the attention of the community in which he paused to do business. As a rule he featured a line of dolls to attract the children, who could be relied upon then to drag their mothers within sight of his other wares. His stock in trade was a pleasing, jovial personality, whence we have our modern word "chap," which meant at one time a "jolly fellow."
