FOREST PRESERVES.

At the session of the New York State Legislature at Albany, Senator Brown introduced a proposed important amendment to the State constitution, which while it will allow the cutting of timber on State lands also will provide for re-forestation and establish a fund for the latter purpose. The amendment reads:

"The Legislature may authorize the sale and removal of hemlock, spruce, pine, balsam or other soft woods in more than ten inches in diameter three feet from the ground. The proceeds of such sale shall be set apart in a separate fund, known as the forest preserve fund, and shall be used only to care for and extend the forests of the State in the forest preserve. Roads may be built in the forest preserve, but franchises shall not be granted for railroad or street railroads upon or across any part of the forest preserve."

It is estimated by the advocates of this amendment that an annual revenue of from a quarter to half a million dollars may be secured by the State through the sales of its marketable timber, and that this annual revenue properly applied in re-forestation will go far towards establishing an inexhaustible supply of timber in the State. Another proposition advanced in that Assembly lands owned by private individuals, be exempt from taxation if the owners agree not to cut timber less than ten inches in diameter three feet from the ground. The people of New York State are determined to effect some scheme of re-forestation. What will the Ontario authorities do about it?

THE ISLANDERS.

Now that the full text of Kipling's poem, The Islanders, has been published on this side of the water, surprise will be felt that so much irritation should have been caused in Great Britain by the production, if it was really caused, comments the Ottawa Citizen.

A good many people will regard The Islanders as worthy a place in the series of really remarkable critical poems with which Kipling has exerted an unique national influence by administering a series of strengthening tonics to public opinion at home since the war began. It is replete with hard, sound, timely sense, and its object is too clear to be misunderstood or ignored even by a British audience. It is incidentally a lash of scorpions calculated to sensitize thick cuticles to receive the lesson which is set forth in scathing, straightforward, derisive diction for the benefit of a people who have come to underrate a birth-right they never won. In the "over-sea dominions" we have worked for what we have. We have won our heritage by fighting man and nature, and are still fighting. We value what we have. The British people at home have not fought anything but ennui and gout for a long time and like individuals who inherit what other people worked for, and have too much time on their hands, their fancy lightly turns to fade. The vital shoulder-to-shoulder patriotism of men who have fought the world with their backs to the wall is in danger of decadence. So-called liberalism under the one hand and hardly less condemnable toleration on the other have come to be esteemed as virtues. Nero fiddled while Rome burned. If London was burned by a hostile fleet to-morrow some of these liberal-minded Britishers would be writing to the newspapers defending the enemy's action and blaming their own countrymen for it. Chamberlain, Milner and Kipling are the three men to-day who are doing the most to stem this malignant tide of anemic sentiment—while their kin of the Younger Nations look on from afar and silently wonder.

That Great Britain needs a rude awakening to the fact that the empire was created by men and men must keep it if the boat is to be made good—"What we have, we hold!"—is patent to any thoughtful mind. Look at the vulnerable position of Britain to-day: A quarter of a million fighting men, 5,000 miles away, themselves and their horses fed from hour to hour in a barren land by the ceaseless procession of ships that ply into Table Bay; the rest of the army locked up in India and outlying garrisons all over the world, and a handful of household troops and militia acting as homeguard in the British Isles.

In event of a coalition of two continental sea powers against her, Britain might be fighting for her existence in a fortnight, and the consequences of a naval disaster of any magnitude would be appalling to think of. If the line of communication with South Africa fell into the enemy's hands the army in South Africa could be starved into surrender without firing a shot and Great Britain itself is in no position to resist invasion if her fleet were drawn off. Even supposing that the Channel fleet met with disaster, her remaining available sea power might have to rally to the defence of the home coasts and leave the army in South Africa to its fate. And after the land lessons of the Tugela and Magersfontein, who is to predict what the result of the next naval war would be? With wireless telegraphy which would enable a wily foe to develop marine "ambushes," and long-range guns which are effective eight and ten miles away, there is no guarantee that the fleets might not steam magnificently into action, massed as in the days of Nelson, to be gloriously annihilated in a naval Magersfontein! No doubt the admirals and captains would stand bravely on the bridge and the crews would voice a deep-throated, defiant, valiant British cheer as the huge battleships sucked down in a shroud of steam and smoke and a crash of rending irons. But the lines of the fleet that meets disaster cannot be recruited in a week or a month or a year. With the fleet would go the control of the sea, and with the control of the sea would go the empire. And people who scoff at the idea now would be as wise after the event as they were on the morning they unfolded their newspapers and read how the unconquerable Highland brigade had been all but annihilated by an enemy they could not even see and how an army corps which was to have fared sumptuously in Pretoria on Christmas day had been hurled back with the loss of fifteen British guns and a ghastly list of casualties by a sleet-like storm of Mauser bullets that came from where they knew not where. And a Lloyd-George would perch on the ruins of London bridge and deliver himself of liberal-minded platitudes impugning the ignoble motives of the ministry which had allowed itself to be drawn into such a war.

If Rudyard Kipling can write a poem like The Islanders with the remnants of his waning powers, he is responsible for an achievement about fifteen times greater than Gilbert Parker, M. P., is able to compass in the full meridian splendor of his genius.

POLITICAL VULTURES.

Montreal Gazette.
The announcement of Senator Prowse's death appears in some of the Liberal papers under the jubilant heading that the Tory majority in the Senate is now down to five. The cynics who used to go about the battlefields taking what they could off the fallen soldiers have descendants in Canadian politics.

APPEARS TO BE COMPREHENSIVE.

Montreal Witness.
So far as appears, there are two candidates for the mayoralty in the field, Mr. Prefontaine and Dr. Lachapelle. There can be no question as to which is the best man. Mr. Prefontaine is the ablest politician who ever rose to the gold collar. His regime as leader of the Montreal council was the most corrupt, reckless and financially licentious of all Canadian history.

Scrofula

This root of many evils—Glandular tumors, abscesses, pimples, and other cutaneous eruptions, sore ears, inflamed eyelids, rickets, dyspepsia, catarrh, readiness to catch cold and inability to get rid of it easily, paleness, nervousness, the consumptive tendency, and other ailments—

Can be completely and permanently removed, no matter how young or old the sufferer.

Hood's Sarsaparilla was given the daughter of Silas Vernor, Warrington, N. Y., who had broken out with scrofula sores all over her face and head. The first bottle helped her and when she had taken six the sores were all healed and her face was smooth. He writes that she has never shown any sign of the scrofula returning.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. Wells, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with a putrid sore throat and asthma for some ten years. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease. Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER, Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel, New York, Jan. 3, 1901.

Drs. Taft Bros. Medicine Co., Gentlemen,—Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform, or ether. Very truly yours, Rev. Dr. Morris Wechsler.

Gentlemen,—I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows on 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the first of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her Asthma disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease.

Yours respectfully, O. D. PHELPS, M. D.
