How many of our present day writers are giving real contributions to literature. The age in which we live is largely to blame for this. An author cannot rise above the age in which he lives gunless he be a man of transcendent gentium. He expresses life as interpreted by the people. The mechanical age has had its effect on our writers. The tides of literary expression and song have ebbed. Commercialism in literature, caused by the writer having his eyes on the publisher—will for money cause the author to give people what they want, not what they need. Do you suppose the sweet singer Scott and his finger on the pulse of the public, or the immortal Browning? I am certain from my knowledge of these writers and others of their kind that they tasted of the feeling in their heart they tasted of the feeling in their heart they must pour out from these great tides that are sweeping through them to the benefit of mankind. We are not only born creators but seekers.

they must pour out from these great tides that are sweeping through them to the benefit of mankind. We are not only born creators but seekers. We are seeking after knowledge. If we are going to taste life we must have the longing to know. Let us not be constrained by custom. Let us not be constrained by custom. Let us reach out to the streams along life's highway, through which we walk, and get a taste of this water and in using these faculties get the fuller glimpse of life that God intended us to get, and in receiving pass on to others that they may be the better because we have lived. Rev. G. A. Logan was tendered a very hearty expression of appreciation of his delightfully helpful and interesting contribution to an evening of much pleasure, moved by Colonel Northup, seconded by Mrs. Alfred Ells. The artists also received the thanks of an appreciative audience. The following programme was greatly enjoyed:
