

ACADIA CONSERVATORY ORCHESTRA GIVES SPLENDID CONCERT

A large audience attended the concert given by the Acadia Conservatory Orchestra, in University Hall last Thursday evening, and all were loud in their praises of the splendid entertainment given, as well as of the fine new hall which was used for the first time, the acoustic properties of which were found to be perfect.

The six numbers given by the orchestra, which is composed of twenty-five members, were all excellently rendered and reflected great credit on the director, Mr. Carl Farnsworth, who is to be congratulated on the fine program presented. The singing of Mr. Jones was never enjoyed by a Wolfville audience and all his selections were loudly encored. Miss Irene Card added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening by her splendid work as accompanist. Taken in all the performance was one of the best musical entertainments ever given in Wolfville. The full program was as follows:

ACADIA DEFEATS MT. ALLISON

In Two Games of Baseball—Scores 14 to 5 and 9 to 0

Two interesting games of baseball were played on the college campus last Saturday afternoon between teams representing Mt. Allison and Acadia universities.

The latter team was easily the better and won both games, the scores being 14 to 5 and 9 to 0.

The first game was replete with heavy hitting and loose fielding but was fairly even until the seventh inning, when the locals ran up a big lead which they retained to the end.

O. Noble hit a triple and C. Munro also hit the ball hard. Elderkin and Munro were the battery for Acadia, and McKenzie and Linden for Mount Allison.

In the second game Munro pitched a two-hit shutout over the visitors. This game was productive of better fielding and pitching. Barteaux, Acadia's Captain, hit a triple with three on bases, Carl Angus and L. Williamson unimpeded.

The line-up:

Acadia—C. Munro, c; B. Elderkin, p; Noble, 1b; Gould, 2b; McPherson, 3b; Eaton, 3b; Barteaux, ss; Lane, rf; J. Elderkin, cf; Bishop, lf; D. Munro, p.

Mount Allison—Linden, c; McGlagaan, p; Archibald, 1b; Chown, 2b; Lister, 3b; Burke, ss; Holland, rf; MacKenzie, cf; Brownell, lf.

MAKING COUNTRY ROADS SAFE FOR PEDESTRIANS

That accidents can occur easily and often in city streets filled with busy throngs is not difficult to understand. It would be surprising if it were otherwise.

Much study has been given to the problem of making city streets as safe as possible for pedestrians, and many rules have been formulated with this object in view. Now the time has come to consider the safety of rural and suburban thoroughfares as they affect the dweller in the country.

One of the most glaring instances of carelessness, even absolute disregard for their own safety on the part of pedestrians is the manner in which many people walk on paved highways on the outskirts of cities. It is advisable for these pedestrians to walk on the left hand side of the road facing the direction from which automobiles may be approaching. Some cities have adopted means of encouraging this precaution by placing warning signs on their highways directing the pedestrian to walk on the left hand side of the road.

The time of greatest danger is the evening. It is astonishing how many people will deliberately walk on the right hand side of the road in the dark, where at times it is almost impossible for a motorist to see them until he is so close that it is extremely difficult for him to stop without hitting them.

When the motorist is driving with dimmed lights to accommodate a car approaching from the opposite direction it puts the pedestrian in a dark pocket with his back turned to the car approaching on the right hand side of the road. He has no chance to judge its speed or its distance from him.

Every motorist knows that when he is passing cars going in the opposite direction with lights on there is a dark spot for a certain distance ahead of his car and it is impossible for him to see a person who is walking ahead especially if the person is dressed in dark clothing.

Often a person walking will not hear a car approaching from the rear because of cars passing him in the opposite direction. On the other hand if he is walking on the left hand side of the road there is very little danger of his being struck from the rear; and he is in a position to see any cars that may be approaching him and can easily avoid danger because he has ample time to step aside and let the car go by.

Any person who gives the question a moment's thought will readily see that this contention is logical, and too much time or attention cannot be given to educating the public in regard to this important and serious matter.

The pedestrian has a right to expect reasonable driving on the part of the motorist, but he must remember that there is much that he can do himself to make the highways safe for everybody. He should use the same care and caution that he expects from the motorist.

On the other hand the motorist should never forget this responsibility. He should remember that driving is a real art. He should study and try to improve himself constantly. It is not a difficult matter to learn to operate a car. But he should not be content with this. He should make sure that he is taking advantage of every feature that the manufacturer has put into his car. That is the way he gains the most comfort, convenience and economy.

The good motorist is always looking for new methods that he can apply to his driving. He learns how to drive with safety over strange roads, how best to make both right and left turns, how to go down steep grades, how to approach strange or dangerous crossroads or railroad crossings, how to drive over the tops of hills, how to negotiate sand and mud, how to pass safely vehicles going in the same direction and how to meet those approaching him.

The traffic problem is an individual problem. It is up to every individual motorist and every individual pedestrian to do his share for safety by obeying the simple rules and precautions that experience has shown are essential.

The individual who obeys these simple precautions, whether he is a motorist or a pedestrian, is almost certain to avoid mishaps. And he will be surprised to see the good effects that are brought about by his example.
