

A Knot of Blue

By William R. A. Wilson, Author of "A Rose of Normandy."
Copyright, 1905, by Little, Brown & Company

Joy as well as sorrow can destroy the most robust appetite. The old man made but a sorry pretense of eating, while Aimee made no effort at all, but chattered away in her excess of happiness, keeping a listening ear meanwhile for the first sound of the expected visitor. Suddenly she stopped talking as she heard a heavy tread in the adjoining room. Her heart stood still an instant in expectancy, when the door opened and Armand, with his handsome countenance darkened somewhat by exposure, stood before them. Aimee uttered a cry of glad recognition and running to him seized his arm, while the Governor, rising more tardily from his chair, grasped the other, and both uttered in one voice their welcome to him.

The good fellow reddened with pleasure as the Governor led him to the table and forced him to sit down, while Aimee, without waiting to call a servant prepared a plate full of tempting food and placed it before him beside a glass filled from the Governor's own decanter. The young man gave a sigh of intense satisfaction as he surveyed the good things, and murmured: "Begging your Excellency's pardon, but this is the first civilized food I have seen since I left Quebec."

"Fall to, then, like the gallant soldier that you are," was the kindly reply, "for ye shall overwhelm you with a score of questions, the answers to which will prevent you from enjoying your feast."

"I have had occasion more than once since leaving you to fight and eat at the same time. Why should I not eat and talk as well? What is your first question? But stop," he continued, as he turned a mischievous glance on Aimee, "you need not ask it. He is alive and well, and has covered himself with glory, and will be here as soon as his duties permit him." The girl blushed deeply at his friendly thrust, and her confusion increased as he went on with a sly laugh: "You wonder, perhaps, why he is not here in stead of me, and are just a little disappointed at his delay. Perhaps he is in the delay, in coming to the Governor before the commander of the expedition had appeared at the Chateau to make his official visit to his excellency. I had no such scruples, but allowed my personal feelings full sway, so came to regard to military etiquette. But then, unlike Raoul, I am no soldier-hero."

"And how did our young friend acquit himself? He was worthy of his illustrious father and his European training. I hope he merited the Governor, trying vainly to conceal his eagerness to learn all of Raoul's experiences."

hiew out his brains. Thus have your enemies have been brought low by the hand of God."

"Grace a Dieu!" was Raoul's fervent exclamation. Then, taking advantage of the animated conversation arising between the Governor and Armand regarding the recent campaign, he drew near to the corner where Aimee sat, strangely silent and abashed.

"Come, mon amie," he said, tenderly, "have you no words of welcome for me?" "So great a hero-warrior, flushed with his victories, I fear would not mist my feeble voice in the loud chorus of praise arising on all sides to greet his homecoming," and Aimee dropped her eyes demurely as she carefully studied the rug at her feet.

"Your voice, however feeble, would be chafed above the loudest cheers of the friendly welcome than the highest commendations of the King in the presence of the entire Court of France. But if my words are powerless to melt you, let this dumb thing, this silken knot of blue plead for me. See how faded it is; that speaks of cold and dampness, rhyers, rhyers; snowdrifts used for a resting place. See how discolored; that I have worn it constantly here; just above my heart, that it might inspire its every beat and strengthen my arm and brain for deeds worthy of my love for you. In the hour of conflict it has spurred me on to greater efforts to atone for the folly of the past. Through the cold, lonely watches of the night, it has whispered of a glorious day with you for sun to banish darkness; of a calm, peaceful twilight with you, my evening star, to guide, refresh, sustain. Ah, Aimee, my joy, and my desire, let me tell you how I love you."

The reserve of the young girl disappeared before the sight of the love-taken. Gradually her eyes rested until they rested with a look that only one man in all the world could fathom, upon that man's earnest countenance. For one glad instant she felt the flood-tide of his loving eloquence surge round her until it threatened to engulf her; and she, who had been so lately so coldly, suddenly rallying her strength she put out her hand, and murmured: "Not now; not here."

"If you were at the old mossy house, you would be here, and I would be beside the brook where you last made me your knight, I should have a story to tell, one you have heard, one that I am told you have heard—just then the Governor called to him, with a twinkling in his eye: "Come, Monsieur le Capitaine, let me share in the secrets you two are whispering."

BOY FOUND IN SACK.

A MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR NEAR ALEXANDRIA, ONT.

Boys Fishing Near McDowell's Rapids Discover the Remains—Death Must Have Taken Place Several Months Ago.

Alexandria, May 12.—About 11.45 a.m. on Saturday two young boys, named Drapato and Paterson, while fishing in the vicinity of McDougall's Rapids on the River De Lie, two miles southeast of Alexandria, discovered, half immersed in the water, the body of an unknown person encased in a sack. Further examination gave evidence that death must have taken place several months ago. The township of Leclercq authorities and Coroner McMillan have been notified of the find, and the matter will be thoroughly investigated.

About Female Ailments.

Not Hard to Cure if Properly and Promptly Treated.

Ask any intelligent physician what causes nine-tenths of all female disease, even including anaemia, nervousness and consumption of constipation. Back comes the answer quick and sharp: "Constipated Bowels."

There is scarcely a single female ailment that has not in its earlier stages symptoms of constipation. How much better off the system is without the poisonous accumulations caused by constipation! How much clearer the complexion, how much fresher one feels when the system is pure and clean. Think it over yourself. Isn't it apparent that a bowel regulator and liver stimulant like Dr. Hamilton's Pills is sure to do good.

Gay spirits, good looks and happy health have returned to many a sick woman through Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Better get a few boxes to-day; purely vegetable, free from injurious ingredients, healthful and antiseptic. Dr. Hamilton's Pills will assist you in a thousand ways.

To death is where consumption leads, if not always immediately, your plain duty is to follow the example of Mrs. F. Rowe, who sends the following letter from Gravel, Port Au Port, Newf.: "Four years ago I got kidney and bladder trouble, I thought it was 'female trouble' and treated it accordingly. Even my doctor in St. John's, said it was so."

In reading about Dr. Hamilton's Pills I noticed symptoms like mine and I bought six boxes. These pills went right to work on my sick condition and helped me from the first. My supposed 'female trouble, which was bladder disease, was cured. My weight increased and I never before was so well to-day. Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box or five boxes for $1. By mail, C. Polson & Co., Hamilton, Ont., U. S. A., or Kingston, Ont.
