The Habit of Worry

Are you worried? If you answer this question truthfully it will probably be in the affirmative, for very few women have learned how to do without worry. Each one of us undoubtedly thinks we have a good deal to cause us anxiety, and perhaps some of us But few human beings, either men or women, ever learn--until perhaps it is too late--how little good and how much harm result from the habit of worrying.

"She isn't happy unless she has something to worry over," is a favorite phrase which possesses a good deal of truth, for there are some women so constituted that unless they are fretting over one thing or another they are not entirely satisfied.

Take the woman in business, for instance. If she has a good position she often worries that she may not be able to keep it, and if she is unfortunate enough to be out of a job she is sick with worry before she procures one. During her daily round of work she finds many things which do not go right--perhaps she makes a mistake in transcribing a letter, or mixes up her accounts in adding up a bill. Whatever the error, it worries her until she has made a small slip seem an enormous mistake.

The result of this constant worry is frayed nerves, an irritable disposition, an unhappy outlook on life and the inability to progress. For no worker who worries can give her best to her work. She stands in her own way, shuts out her own chance of advancement.

A Lover of the Blessed Sacrament

St. Francis de Sales used to say to all his penitents whether in the cloister or in the world: Come confidently in peace in humility that you may respond to the desire of the Divine Spouse who, in order to unite Himself to us, has annihilated and abused Himself so far as to become our food, the food of the food who are themselves the food of worms. Do not omit your Communion on account of coldness and distractions, for all that takes place in the senses and without your consent. Nothing will so quickly restore peace to your soul as the visit of its King; nothing will so warm it as its Sun; nothing will so sweetly permeate it as its Balm, O God, what happiness for you that your soul while awaiting the union that we shall have with Our Lord in Heaven may unite itself to Him by this Divine Sacrament in such a way that we receive by actual Communion Him whom the cherubim and seraphim adore and receive by actual contemplation. There He repairs and purifies everything, subdues, vivifies, sanctifies everything. He loves in the heart, understands in the brain, lives in the breast, sees with the eyes, speaks with the tongue and performs in us every one of our actions. Then we no longer live in ourselves, but Jesus Christ lives in us.

Thus did the holy Bishop's heart pour itself out in love, admiration and gratitude for this most lovable of all mysteries. He used to say that he found help for every need in the most Blessed Sacrament and the Mother of God, for the love of Mary is inseparable from that of her Son.

Thoughts on the Divine Paraclete

We must remember that the Holy Ghost places our security wholly in the custody of the tongue: "He that keepeth his mouth, keepeth his soul; but he that hath no guard on his speech shall meet with evils." (Prov. VIII, 3.) Giving us to know that he who guards his lips keeps his soul from all harm.

... keeps his soul from those sins, which so commonly incur who are fond of talking much. Silence alone is a most safe sentinel over the mouth, for this alone is the seal of which the Holy Ghost is speaking.--Fr. Scaramelli, S. J.

The spirit of the Lord hath filled the whole world (Wis. I, 7) because He is all goodness, kindness, and charity; and this is the spirit of those who are true faithful of Jesus Christ. They, too, desire to do good to the whole world. Happy art thou if thou possessest the Divine Spirit! most miserable if thou dost not! For in that case thou lackest the fairest quality of a Christian. Take this opportunity of endeavoring to kindle in thy heart the desire of acquiring it. Humbly invoke the Holy Ghost. Frequently recite one of the beautiful Hymns addressed to Him, the Veni Sancte Spiritus or the Veni Creator Spiritus.--Fr. Segneri, S. J.

It was through the power of the Holy Ghost, that--the World was made flesh and dwelt amongst us. The incarnation of the Son of God was effected in Mary. And since none can be saved unless he (by the practice of virtue) be made conformable to the image of the Son of God, implore the Divine Spirit that through the intercession of Mary, His Immaculate Spouse. He may produce within him, this Divine likeness.--Fr. Merianus, O. M. C. P.

St. Stephen was filled with the Holy Ghost, from whom proceeded his charity towards God and his neighbor. He showed his love for God by dying in the conflict; he showed his love for his neighbor by praying for those who stoned him (to death)--praying for his enemies. Are you full of charity? Are you full of the Holy Ghost? "And he being full of the Holy Ghost," looking up steadfastly saw, "the glory of God, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God." (Act VII.) --Fr. Cassel.

Your Level Best

One of Mark Twain's humorous poems deals with a young man who was chiefly remarkable for the fact that whatever he undertook to do, "he did his level best." No matter what the undertaking was, great or small, important or insignificant, "he did his level best." He was wise. It pays to be thorough.

The young man was hired to patch a fence by one of the petty office holders of the place. "Don't put any unnecessary work on it," the man said; "and being out of sight behind the shrubbery, it won't matter what it looks like. It isn't worth more than a dollar; if you'll do it for that go ahead."

The young man spent the best part of the day on the job. When he came for his pay his employer went out to look at the "patch." It was not only substantially done, but with the utmost neatness and care.

"I told you I didn't care how it looked, didn't I?" said the owner, angrily. "Now you'll be wanting three-quarters of a day's pay."

"I said I'd do it for a dollar," returned the workman, shouldering his tools, "because I wanted the money, if I'd finished in half the time and gone home, I should only have been sitting around there doing nothing."

"Well you're a mighty foolish boy that's all I've to say," replied the other, as he handed over the money.

Not long after this the young carpenter went to a neighboring town and steadily worked his way up. Some ten years later the owner of the patched fence had risen to the position of county commissioner, in his little town, a growing city, and was about to erect a number of fine municipal buildings. Among the many applicants for the contract the commissioner noticed a name that seemed in some way familiar to him. After a moment he recalled the incident of the patched fence. The estimate of the young carpenter, who was now a contractor, proved to be a reasonable one, and the work was given into his hands.

"You want bonds--" the man began.

"No," returned the commissioner, "it won't be necessary in this case, I think. That patch you once put on my fence is guarantee enough. It's standing yet."

Sincerity and Truth

Sincerity and truth are virtues not easily exercised in social life. They often find an antagonist in the laudable desire to please. It is often difficult to speak what we really think. The temptation is strong to make our speech vary according to the person spoken to, to pretend to agree with opinions with which we entirely and strongly disagree, and to encourage a show of intimacy with people whom we dislike, and perhaps go as far as to despise. It is often extremely difficult in association with others to act at once sincerely and kindly. Nevertheless, truth is divine and absolute, and of all duties the love and practice of truth ranks first and highest.

The soldieryship of the French priests now wearing the uniform of the French army and bearing a part in the fortunes and misfortunes (if there be such) of that army is of such a character that an anti-clerical French general selects priests for difficult work as being "steady under fire, indifferent to death, untiringly energetic and unfailingly cheerful." This we have on the authority of the "Illustrated London News."

Two sections of the community which have occupied Cardinal Bourne during the past week have been the Catholic Police Guild and the Catholic Postal Guild, both of which are in a flourishing condition and show that the new impetus amongst us for Catholic organization has not slackened.

writes the London correspondent of the Catholic Press Association. The Catholic constables and their officers were received at the Archbishops house, and they presented the Cardinal with a gold medal. He compared them favorably with the police of the world and told them they had to look after a population as large as that of Belgium and larger than that of Switzerland. The Catholic bobbies, who are mostly Irish were afterwards entertained at tea. The Catholic Postal Guild, now numbering more than four hundred members, heard Mass and received Communion, in the crypt of Westminster Cathedral.

The Sisters of the Santa Maria Institute, Cincinnati, possess a famous rosary, which has attracted much attention. It is the rosary used by the Empress Carlotta, wife of the illustrious Emperor Maximilian, and was secured in Mexico a number of years ago by Mrs. Eleanor Childs Meehan, a friend of the institute.

The medal, which bears the imprint of the Virgin of Guadalupe and is much larger than a twenty-dollar gold piece, is of the purest gold, as is the chain that holds the beads. The gold cross was missing from it when it was found by Mrs. Meehan, after all traces of it had been lost for many years. The cross was replaced, and for a long time Mrs. Meehan, who travels much, took it with her on all her journeys. It has touched all the famous shrines of Europe, and has been blessed by the late Pontiff, Leo XIII.

In the New Testament the Lord speaks of a woman losing a great. This is an English term denoting a coin, the greatest made in 1351, to the value of four pence, eight cents of our money. The term penny," which our Saviour used in the parable of the vineyard, as a man's daily wage, was equal to fifteen cents in our money.

The thirty pieces of silver which the Jews weighed out to Judas as the price of his betrayal of our Lord, were equal to from $17 to $20 in our money.
