Just here in my cottage window, Catching files in the sun, With a patched and faded apron, Stands my own little one. His face is as pure and handsome

As the baby's over the way, and he keeps my heart from breaking At my toiling every day, etimes when the day is ended. And I sit in the dusk to rest, With the face of my sleeping darling Hugged close to my lonely breast, I pray that my neighbor's baby May not catch heaven's roses all, But that some may crown the forehead

And when I draw the stockings And kiss the rosy dimples, In his limbs so round and sweet-I think of the dainty garments Some little children wear, And that my God withholds them

May God forgive my envy-I know not what I said : My heart is crushed and troubled— Mr neighbor's boy is dead! As they carried it out today In the mansion over the wa.

The light is fair in my window : The flowers bloom at my door My boy is chasing the sunbeams That dance on the cottage floor On my darling's check today. Of the nansion over the way,

From his cradle to his grave man relies for his happiness upon the love of woman, says a Southern writer. His light, his joy, his very life, depends blindingly and crustingly upon the mothed love that nurses his infant years, tends his child-hood, trains his youth, and rejoices in his manhood. Infinitely holy, utterly self-ascrificing, pure, noble, heautiful is the "maternal instinct"—and knowing the heights of it, proving its strength, seeing its abnegation of self, men call st divine—and so realize the love of God unto all humanity. Yet even from this fount of erquisite tenderness they turn their steps to a love more alluring, more entrancing, more absorbing; they leave all and cling to their wives, possessink in them everything. Wonderful and peculiar is the great mingling of human hearts, of organisms irresistibly attracted, of souls that feel with and for each other, of two brains forming one mind, of two lives and yet another love—paternal affection.
