Church of England Educational Campaign.

Whoever inspired this Educational Campaign is to receive public thanks. It would be difficult to locate the party. The Education Committee of the Diocesan Synod has had some share in it, I should judge, for during the past ten years it has again and again forced to the attention of succeeding Governments the need for greater attention to our educational work and has proposed many important additions to our educational system. The Methodist people have certainly shown us how to organize the Campaign. Every encouragement has come from His Grace the Archbishop of St. John's in any move in the direction of improving the means of education, and His Grace has made some very important public announcements on the subject. I have little doubt that the war has stirred us all to recognize more fully than before the vast importance of education to every phase of life—private and public, individual and social. Be all this as it may, our Campaign is on and we want 350,000 dollars—more if obtainable. I concluded my third lot of notes by emphasizing how essential to welfare higher education is and that if a University cannot be reached then our Colleges must be expanded and uplifted. I propose in this set of notes to deal briefly with the history of the Church of England College. The Church of England College originated in 1850, partly out of a private school maintained by Bishop Feild and partly out of a General Academy, which was started in 1846 and maintained by the Government. Its existence was due to the efforts of the great Bishop who, previous to his appointment to the Newfoundland See, had already in England made a reputation as an Educationist: Bishop Feild was a man of the finest character and his life in the Colony should ever be an inspiration to every lad who attends the College he founded. For some time the work was conducted in part of a house called Avalon, on Forest Road. In 1858 the present spacious and central site was secured and the substantial building forming the centre and west wing of the present suite of buildings was erected. In 1876 the plain wooden structure to the rear of the main building was added, and in 1894, owing to a large increase in number of students, the handsome extension on the East and North was made. In 1877 the Synod Girls' School was made a part of the institution but did not come under the complete management of the Directors of the College until 1916, when the Synod directed that this should be done. From 1850 to 1892 the institution was known as the Church of England Academy. By the Education Act of 1892 it was styled the Church of England College, and in 1894 the boys' side was named Bishop Feild College and, a year or so later, the girls' side Bishop Spencer College. In 1918 the present Feild Hall was opened as a residence for boarders attending Bishop Feild College, and

In January of this year the British Hall property was acquired for the purpose of Spencer College. In 1912 a large house on Church Hill was purchased for boarders attending Bishop Spencer College. From its start the institution has enjoyed the patronage and protection of the several Governors of the Colony, and the care and oversight of the several Bishops of Newfoundland. Consistently the effort of the institution has been to afford to the boys and girls attending it not only such knowledge as would fit them to take up their positions in life, but such training as would lead them to fear God, Honor the King and love the Brethren. The lives of the boys and girls as they have passed into manhood and womanhood have amply proved that the seed sown at the College has borne good fruit. Dealing with the boys only, let us pause for a few moments to think of some of those who received their early training in, or who were otherwise closely identified in life with, the institution. It is not claimed that the College is entitled to all the credit for the lives of those to be named, but it is claimed that it did in some measure—who shall determine how great—mould their path. In the list that follows no particular order has been attempted; it is only claimed that they are in some degree products of the fine institutions, to amplify which the campaign has been inaugurated. Here are the names of a few of the "Old Boys": His Excellency Sir C. Alexander Harris, Governor. The Rt. Rev. Wm. C. White, Bishop. Sir W. H. Horwood, Chief Justice. Police Bring Prisoners

The S. S. Ingraham arrived here early this morning from the Labrador with six prisoners, who are alleged to have been implicated in the Flat Island affair of a couple of weeks ago. The names of the men are, Aaron found to mention all, and those named above have been taken almost at random from a long, long list.

—Deceased. What does the country owe to the institution that has produced such citizens? Help the campaign!

Ralph, John Hallet, Lewis Ralph, Reuben Ralph, Edward Morgan and Thomas Butt. On arrival they were taken to the police station.

When you want Sausages, why—get ELLIS'; they're the best.

THE SUBMARINES AND BOVRIL

During the War food supplies were greatly restricted in the United Kingdom owing to the submarine blockade, and Bovril was so indispensable to the soldiers, wounded, and the people that it had to be retained in the British Isles, where it is made, or sent to the fighting fronts.

Fresh supplies of Bovril have now arrived and there is no longer any need to make shift with substitutes which lack its unique vital and energizing properties.

Bovril is the food whose body-building powers have been proved by independent scientific experiments to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken.
