In the fourteenth century a fashion came into vogue in France, Spain and Italy of two wedding rings being used in the marriage ceremony. They were connected by a chain, and one was placed on the finger of the bride, the other on that of the groom.

KILLED ON THE TRACK.

Our Cleaners Stepped in Front of a Moving Train—Two Dead and Three Injured.

New York, Jan. 18.—An engine ran into a crowd of car cleaners on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at One Hundred and Forty-Second street, yesterday, killing two women and injuring two other women and a man so badly that they will probably die. They had stepped aside to let a long train pass and did not hear the light engine coming on another track.

Just as the express had whisked by the engine struck them. A chorus of horrible shrieks was the first intimation the engineer had of the calamity. The Becker and Mahan women were ground under the wheels of the engine, and the others were thrown against a stone wall adjoining.

The killed are: Lizzie Becker, 36 years old, married, crushed and instantly killed; Della Mahan, 36 years old, married, crushed and died ten minutes after the accident.

Injured—Maria Drumm, 65 years old, widow, internal injuries; Maggie Tracey, 35 years old, single, right foot cut off and right leg fractured; Louis Yender, 50 years old, fracture of right leg and internal injuries; probably fatal.

Their parents will be invited free.

THE I. O. F. DEFENDED.
Much discussion has taken place in recent years over the relative merits of the old-line insurance companies and the newer friendly society insurance organizations. The latest tussle excites much comment. It is being conducted between Mr. Wm. McCabe, of the North American Life, and Dr. Oronhyatekha, the head of the Independent Order of Foresters. In another column of today's "Advertiser" will be found the doctory doctor's reply to Mr. McCabe's strictures on the I. O. F. In view of the fact that nearly every one is now insured, in one institution or another, or ought to be insured, Dr. Oronhyatekha's defense of the I. O. F. will be read with much interest.

Number Two's Turn.

Another Company of the Seventh Battalion Has Its Annual Dinner.

Those Who Were There—The Toast List and Replies—Lieut. Col. Lindsay Gives the Boys Some Good Advice on Matters of Importance.

It was a jolly crowd of soldiers that gathered in the club house of the Seventh Battalion last night and made the annual dinner of No. 2 Company what it proved to be a great success. The attendance was not by any means limited to those who are enlisted in that particular company. Nearly every company in the regiment was represented by either its sergeants or color-sergeants, and besides these Lieut. Col. Lindsay, Major George Hayes (an old officer in No. 2) and Surgeon W. J. Mitchell were present, and assisted in making the evening both pleasant and profitable. The walls of the large room in which the dinner was held were profusely decorated with evergreens and Union Jacks, while the tables were adorned with the handsome silver cup won by the company's team at the Dominion Rifle League matches, the Tracy challenge cup, won in the battalion matches, and an abundance of dainty viands prepared in the very best style. Proceedings were begun at 9 o'clock, the first on the programme being the supper. To say that justice was done to it by every man is almost unnecessary; if any doubt exists on this point, just ask any of the following, who were engaged in the melee: Major George Hayes, who presided in the absence of the company's captain, J. A. Thomas, who was Lieut. Col. Lindsay who sat on the chairman's right; Surgeon Mitchell, who was seated on the left; Sgt.-Major J. D. McCrimmon, Col. Sgt. A. H. Galbraith, E. Company; Col. Sgt. Chas. W. Stein, B. Company; Col. Sgt. Edwin J. Freeland, A. Company; Corps. J. T. Hennessy, F. Company; Ptes. H. Henshaw, F. Taylor, R. Cooper, J. Lacey, W. Robson, R. Mercer, H. Bartlett, Harry Donaghy, George Insell; Sgt. E. H. Price, No. 1 Company, R. C. R. I.; Hospital Sgt. R. A. Macgregor; Sgt. T. W. Jackson, Thirty-Third Battalion; Sgt. J. E. Foyat, A. Company; Col. Sgt. B. Jacobs, C. Company; or Sgt. H. Erskine, D. Company.

Supper over, Major Hayes called the company to order, and read a letter of regret from Capt. Thomas. He referred to the foremost position the company held years ago, when Messrs. Parkinson and Allen were its color-sergeants, when it was full strength, and when it carried off all the prizes at the shooting matches. He regretted that E. Company had displaced B. Company last year, but he expressed the hope that ere long No. 2 would again work its way into the front rank.

"The Queen" was honored by the singing of the National Anthem, and coupled with the toast of "The Commandant and Staff" was the name of Col. Lindsay.

As the colonial rose to respond the company sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Col. Lindsay assured his hearers that it afforded him a great deal of pleasure to be present with the boys. It was pleasing to him to meet the non-commissioned officers and men on such an occasion—an occasion forming one part of citizen soldiering which deserved to be cultivated as largely as any other part. The idea of soldiering in the times of peace was not altogether to learn how to turn, salute, shoulder arms, or the like; soldiers should learn to enjoy themselves in a rational way, and he did not think there was a more suitable way of doing this than by having a dinner. When a company holds a dinner it should not only be a time for fun but also a time for holding a post-mortem on the work on the year just passed, and a time when the soldiers should resolve to make a better record for themselves in the ensuing twelve months. It was quite possible, thought the colonel hoped not at all probable, that the men might see some of the value of soldiering before many years were passed. In Canada every one felt perfectly safe, because the country was not surrounded by hostile nations, because the country was large, but more particularly because Canada had at its back the grandest nation on earth. (Applause.) The very fact of England's greatness was causing other nations to become jealous of her. She had been progressing for the last century while others were looking on, and now, through the means of her navy, she could roll up her sleeves and say to the other powers, "Come on!" She did it not long ago, but the challenge was not accepted. What Col. Lindsay desired the volunteers to remember was that, though a fight was not being sought after, every effort to promote the battalion meant the better defense of the empire.

"The Army and Navy," "Sister Corps," "Sister Companies," and several other toasts were suitably replied to, a number of the speakers referring to the shooting competitions and the position No. 2 Company had held for several years. Among those who responded were Sgt. Price, Surgeon Mitchell, Pte. Robson, Sgt. Jackson, Col. Sgt. Freeland, Col. Sgt. Jacobs, Sgt. Hayman and Corp. Hennessy. The reference to the shooting led Col. Lindsay to speak a second time, when he imparted some good, sound advice as to how the respective companies could attain a high degree of marksmanship.
