

FINAL CITY LEAGUE GAMES WILL BE PLAYED TOMORROW

Pitcher Watis to Appear in Struthers Uniform.

Blenheim Bowlers Defeat Clinton in Close Contest.

BASEBALL.

CLOSING CITY LEAGUE GAMES.
The last games of the City League schedule will be played at Tecumseh Park tomorrow afternoon. At 2:30 the Rockets and Struthers will meet, the opposing pitchers being Phillips and Watis. The London-Albion game will be called at 4 o'clock.

AL WATTS RETURNS.

Pitcher Al Watts, who distinguished himself as a twirler in the Michigan League, has returned to London. He has been signed by the Struthers team and will pitch for them tomorrow against the Rockets.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

At New York—New York-Brooklyn game postponed, rain.

At Pittsburgh—Pittsburgh 7, St. Louis 6.

At Cincinnati—Cincinnati 2, Chicago 0.

At Boston—Boston 8, Philadelphia 1.

At Chicago—Cleveland-Chicago, no game—wet grounds.

At Boston—Boston 5, Baltimore 2.

At St. Louis—St. Louis 6, Cincinnati 2.

At Philadelphia—Washington 2, Philadelphia 6.

EASTERN LEAGUE.

At Montreal—Providence 4, Montreal 9.

At Toronto—Toronto 1, Worcester 3.

At Buffalo—Buffalo 12, Newark 1.

At Rochester—Jersey City 4, Rochester 0.

LAWN BOWLING.

A CLOSE CONTEST.

Rinks from Blenheim and Clinton, selected by B. L. Gosnell and Wm. Jackson, respectively, met on the local green yesterday; the result was a victory for the former by the narrow margin of one shot.

Following are the rinks and the scores:

Blenheim. Clinton.
W. Winter, Dr. Holmes,
W. W. Shillingford, Dr. Bryden,
John Mulholland, W. Bryden,
R. L. Gosnell, W. Jackson,
R. L. Gosnell, W. Jackson,
Duckworth, J. Taylor,
Dugald Samson, W. W. Faron,
John Perry, D. A. Forester,
C. Langford, J. Harland,
skip, skip, 11 11

BOXING.

THE LOUISVILLE INJUNCTION.
Louisville, Ky., Sept. 18.—The injunction suit to prevent the prize fight between McGovern and Young Corbett here, Sept. 22, was argued before Judge Emme Field today.

The defendants presented an answer to the petition, in which they refuted all the allegations made by the attorney-general.

They also presented evidence, and depositions taken yesterday were filed as evidence.

GANS DEFEATS GARDNER.
Baltimore, Sept. 18.—Joe Gans, the light-weight champion, knocked out Gus Gardner, Philadelphia, last night before the Eureka Athletic Club in the fifth round of their 20-round bout.

The fight was a close one, but Gans, out of the ring weighed in at 138 pounds, out of the ring weighed in at 138 pounds.

During the first three rounds Gardner avoided the colored boy. In the fourth round Gans got to his man and landed a heavy left to the solar plexus, which sent Gardner down, took the count, and came up groggy.

The gong saved him. In the fifth round Gans landed three hard punches, and Gardner, after sending him out, Referee Charlie White assisted the Philadelphian to his feet, and sent him to his corner.

THE TURF.

AT HAWTHORNE.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—The Emulation steeplechase handicap over the short course at Hawthorne today, two of the four starters, Philadelphia, last night before the Eureka Athletic Club in the fifth round of their 20-round bout.

The first three rounds Gardner avoided the colored boy. In the fourth round Gans got to his man and landed a heavy left to the solar plexus, which sent Gardner down, took the count, and came up groggy.

The gong saved him. In the fifth round Gans landed three hard punches, and Gardner, after sending him out, Referee Charlie White assisted the Philadelphian to his feet, and sent him to his corner.

ENOUGH TO PAY EXPENSES.
Montreal, Sept. 17.—The British colony in the visit to that country of an All-Canada football club, have guaranteed $3,000, which will be at least enough to pay traveling expenses.

The Canadian club, who are to leave for England the latter part of November and the first game is scheduled for Dec. 13.

RACES POSTPONED.
New York, Sept. 18.—The races at the Empire City track were postponed on account of rain. Thursday's programme will be decided tomorrow and the card for Friday will go over to Saturday.

YACHTING.

ABOUT SHAMROCK III.

London, Sept. 18.—Confirming the dispatches of the Associated Press on the subject, the Yachting World today says: All the plans for building the Shamrock III, and the most forward of the building, have been completed.

It is certain that she will be ready for launching much earlier than either of Sir Thomas Lipton's previous challenge vessels.

The vessel will be specially manufactured, with the view of securing minimum weight and maximum strength and reliability.

Although she is a racing vessel, as her predecessors, no expense will be spared which will in any way increase her chances of success.

GOLF.

London golfers on Tuesday defeated a team from Simcoe by 42 holes. Following were the scores:

London. Simcoe.
C. Brown, 11 Geo. I. McKie, 0
Col. Peters, 11 W. Y. Wallace, 0
Kilgour, 11 G. H. Backus, 0
Dr. McDonald, 11 C. E. Boyd, 0
Col. Young, 11 C. E. Boyd, 0
C. G. Gibbons, 11 E. Reid, 0
H. Hobbs, 11 T. R. B. Nelles, 0
Meredith, 11 D. Wadsworth, 0
Sharpe, 11 H. B. Donly, 0
Turnbull, 11 F. E. Curtis, 0

Total, 42 Total, 0

CURE YOURSELF.
Cures for all ailments, including rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, etc. Sold by Druggists.

Bind Your Magazines.
Every opportunity to save your book by having them satisfactorily bound. Blank Books made to order. All classes of repairing.

H. P. BOCK.

THE fact that so many lawyers, writers, preachers and thinkers are devoted to coffee has caused it to be called "the intellectual beverage." Coffee of high grade is unquestionably a great stimulant to brain-workers, and Chase & Sanborn's Coffee is especially valuable. If you would be a brilliant thinker, drink it. A pound of such coffee is worth two pounds of ordinary coffee! Why not give it a trial the next time you buy coffee?

Her recompense.

Audrey Waldemar had always supposed herself to be independently rich. Not a thought or care had ever disturbed her regarding her future in a pecuniary way. She had never known need or want that could not be gratified, and had always been as free and generous with her money as if her purse had been inexhaustible.

She had not, indeed, exceeded her income—her man's business had taken care of that—but she had never thought of being at all saving of it, since she knew that each quarter would bring its accustomed supply.

But one day her lawyer called upon her and informed her that beyond a few hundred dollars she was penniless.

After remaining in New York three or four years, Audrey had resolved to sell her large estate in the country. She had tried to make the most of it, to spend a couple of summers, but somehow she felt very lonely and lonely in the big house, and preferred to travel or visit some quiet mountain retreat during the warm weather. It seemed all folly to keep the place and keep the money up the year round, while, of course, it was a continual expense, so it had been sold and the proceeds invested in stock.

But now a bank, in which Miss Waldemar was a heavy stockholder, had suddenly suspended payment, and it was declared that the assets were only sufficient to pay ten cents on the dollar.

There was a western railroad in which Audrey had a number of shares. It had paid a dividend for a long time, but during the last year or two had been running behind-hand at a fearful rate, until now its stock was considered almost worthless.

All this was astounding news to her; she could not comprehend it, and was so disturbed that she could not decide upon what course to pursue.

"I suppose my railroad stock possesses little marketable value now," she said to Mr. Hosmer.

"Even if it could be sold, it would not but a very small sum just now."

"If I should dispose of it for what I can get, and take ten cents on the dollar for my bank stock, how much would all net me?" Audrey asked.

"Very little—so little that I hesitate to name the probable sum, less than you have been accustomed to spend in a year," he answered, reluctantly.

"And if I should let matters rest as they are, is it at all probable that they will better themselves in the future?"

"Barely possible," he answered. "I am extremely doubtful. However, I feel somewhat sensitive, since I have been acting for you, and I will allow you five per cent more than their market value on your railroad stocks, and trust to luck in getting my money back."

Mr. Hosmer seemed to feel as if to some extent he was to blame for this calamity.

"Well, I am not in a condition today to decide the matter," Audrey said, after thinking it over for a few moments. "I will consider it, and let you know in a few days."

When Rich came home she told him of Mr. Hosmer's evil tidings, and asked his advice.

"I know but very little about either railroad or bank stock," said Mr. Rich. "You know that Mr. Remington, the architect who has taken such a great interest in my drawings, is considered a very rich man, and I am sure he will be able to tell me what to do."

But first tell me, Aunt Audrey, just how you stand pecuniarily. How much money can you lay your hands upon to call your own?"

"Less than many hundreds of dollars," Miss Waldemar answered, sadly, and heaving a deep sigh as she realized how very little it was.

She had spent more than half that amount often upon a single costume.

"Why, Aunt Audrey, how could you do that? You allowed me a year for spending money while I was in college," the young man exclaimed, a quick flush mounting to his brow.

"Don't imagine," Rich, that I begrudge a penny of what has been expended upon you," Audrey returned, thinking he was making himself uncomfortable in view of what she had just said to educate him. "It is a great trial," she added, "and it will cost me a great deal more to get it most on your account, for I never wanted you to have a year of travel abroad."

Again that crimson flush suffused Rich's face, but he made no reply, and a few moments he got up and left the house.

He did not refer to the subject again for a day or two, but he had noticed that Audrey often seemed his face questioningly, while she looked worn and anxious. The third day, however, after receiving their ill tidings, he came into her presence with sparkling eyes and an animated countenance.

"I am ready to talk to you now, Aunt Audrey, about my future," he said, "and you to pay more attention to me. I have constituted myself your man of business from this time on."

Audrey laid down her work, smiled at his eager manner, but did not make any reply, and he continued:

"I have had a long talk with Mr. Remington; I took three liberty notes our troubles plainly to him, and I find that he is also a loser by these same speculations, although not to such an extent. He advises you to wait—let everything rest just as it is, and he hopes that matters will right themselves, at least in a measure, soon. That is what he has come to, and he is not a man who can be so easily misled."

"Yes, but Rich, he doesn't know his resources; he can afford to wait; but it will take our all."

"Not quite," Aunt Audrey, Rich said, eagerly. "You know," he went on, "his father-in-law, Mr. Remington, is a man of a thousand dollars a year while I was in college, but for some time past he has had hard work to make his own way in the world. I knew that my other expenses were very heavy, and my conscience wouldn't allow me to spend what you gave me. I said to myself, I could not without appearing mean, or unworthy, to have my Aunt Audrey's character for generosity. I invested it in a bank, and dear Aunt Audrey, there is more than two thousand dollars to credit there today. Of course, it is all yours, you dear, blessed woman," he went on, gathering her two hands into his and regarding her with almost worshipful

"SEAL BRAND" in red and sub. Tin Cans (see ad.)
Other high grades in richly-colored parchment (see moderate prices)

fondness, "and I only regret now that there isn't much more—I might have saved more just as well as not, for there were lots of fellows there who had to get along on far less than I should have had."

Audrey was overcome by this tale. The great tears rolled over her face, and she had not time to say a word of gratitude for this noble boy whom she had rescued from a life of poverty, and, perhaps, of degradation, and who was repaying her so grandly in this hour of trouble.

"I didn't tell you anything about it, did I?" Rich continued, apologetically, "because I was afraid you might think me mercenary, perhaps. I mean, I kept thinking to myself that some time it might come handy. I knew you had abundance, and that I was doing so, by my wrong in storing it away; while, at the same time, I felt I had no right to cultivate extravagant habits by spending the large amount you had so generously allowed me. Now, one thing more, and then I shall be through, this money will not last forever; we must have some other resource for the future. It has been settled for a long time that I am to be an architect; Mr. Remington has told me many times that I was cut out for one—that I had a great deal of talent in that direction, and he is the man whom I should like to take care of myself in my profession."

"I have let myself to him today for five hundred dollars to travel and visit some quiet mountain retreat during the warm weather. It seemed all folly to keep the place and keep the money up the year round, while, of course, it was a continual expense, so it had been sold and the proceeds invested in stock."

But now a bank, in which Miss Waldemar was a heavy stockholder, had suddenly suspended payment, and it was declared that the assets were only sufficient to pay ten cents on the dollar.

There was a western railroad in which Audrey had a number of shares. It had paid a dividend for a long time, but during the last year or two had been running behind-hand at a fearful rate, until now its stock was considered almost worthless.

All this was astounding news to her; she could not comprehend it, and was so disturbed that she could not decide upon what course to pursue.

"I suppose my railroad stock possesses little marketable value now," she said to Mr. Hosmer.

"Even if it could be sold, it would not but a very small sum just now."

"If I should dispose of it for what I can get, and take ten cents on the dollar for my bank stock, how much would all net me?" Audrey asked.

"Very little—so little that I hesitate to name the probable sum, less than you have been accustomed to spend in a year," he answered, reluctantly.

"And if I should let matters rest as they are, is it at all probable that they will better themselves in the future?"

"Barely possible," he answered. "I am extremely doubtful. However, I feel somewhat sensitive, since I have been acting for you, and I will allow you five per cent more than their market value on your railroad stocks, and trust to luck in getting my money back."

Mr. Hosmer seemed to feel as if to some extent he was to blame for this calamity.

"Well, I am not in a condition today to decide the matter," Audrey said, after thinking it over for a few moments. "I will consider it, and let you know in a few days."

When Rich came home she told him of Mr. Hosmer's evil tidings, and asked his advice.

"I know but very little about either railroad or bank stock," said Mr. Rich. "You know that Mr. Remington, the architect who has taken such a great interest in my drawings, is considered a very rich man, and I am sure he will be able to tell me what to do."

But first tell me, Aunt Audrey, just how you stand pecuniarily. How much money can you lay your hands upon to call your own?"

"Less than many hundreds of dollars," Miss Waldemar answered, sadly, and heaving a deep sigh as she realized how very little it was.

She had spent more than half that amount often upon a single costume.

"Why, Aunt Audrey, how could you do that? You allowed me a year for spending money while I was in college," the young man exclaimed, a quick flush mounting to his brow.

"Don't imagine," Rich, that I begrudge a penny of what has been expended upon you," Audrey returned, thinking he was making himself uncomfortable in view of what she had just said to educate him. "It is a great trial," she added, "and it will cost me a great deal more to get it most on your account, for I never wanted you to have a year of travel abroad."

Again that crimson flush suffused Rich's face, but he made no reply, and a few moments he got up and left the house.

He did not refer to the subject again for a day or two, but he had noticed that Audrey often seemed his face questioningly, while she looked worn and anxious. The third day, however, after receiving their ill tidings, he came into her presence with sparkling eyes and an animated countenance.

"I am ready to talk to you now, Aunt Audrey, about my future," he said, "and you to pay more attention to me. I have constituted myself your man of business from this time on."

Audrey laid down her work, smiled at his eager manner, but did not make any reply, and he continued:

"I have had a long talk with Mr. Remington; I took three liberty notes our troubles plainly to him, and I find that he is also a loser by these same speculations, although not to such an extent. He advises you to wait—let everything rest just as it is, and he hopes that matters will right themselves, at least in a measure, soon. That is what he has come to, and he is not a man who can be so easily misled."

"Yes, but Rich, he doesn't know his resources; he can afford to wait; but it will take our all."

"Not quite," Aunt Audrey, Rich said, eagerly. "You know," he went on, "his father-in-law, Mr. Remington, is a man of a thousand dollars a year while I was in college, but for some time past he has had hard work to make his own way in the world. I knew that my other expenses were very heavy, and my conscience wouldn't allow me to spend what you gave me. I said to myself, I could not without appearing mean, or unworthy, to have my Aunt Audrey's character for generosity. I invested it in a bank, and dear Aunt Audrey, there is more than two thousand dollars to credit there today. Of course, it is all yours, you dear, blessed woman," he went on, gathering her two hands into his and regarding her with almost worshipful

A Wonderful Medicine.

Beecham's Pills

FOR ALL
Bilious and Nervous Disorders,

Sick Headache, Constipation,

Wind and Pains in Stomach,

Impaired Digestion,

Disordered Liver and Female Ailments.

PREPARED ONLY BY THE PROPRIETOR,
Thomas Beecham, St. Helens, Eng.

Sold by all Druggists
in Canada and U. S. America.

In boxes, 25 cents.

Jim Dumps had always felt quite blue
When rent and other bills fell due.
Collectors seemed to fill the air,
And landlords sprang from ev'rywhere.
'Tis different now; no blues for him,
Since "Force" has made him "Sunny Jim!"

"Force"

The Ready-to-Serve Cereal adds daily deposits to health's bank account.

Sweet, crisp flakes of wheat and malt—eaten cold.

Must Have It.

"I am arranging to spend a few weeks at Cape Cod, and want to know if I can buy 'Force' there. I must have it, it has been of great benefit not only to myself, but also to my daughter-in-law and her little ones."
(Name furnished on application.)

BRANTFORD FIRMS ARE BURNED OUT

Worst Fire the City Has Had for Years.

THREE FIREMEN WERE INJURED

Fire Blazing at 1 O'Clock This Morning—One Firm's Loss Placed at $70,000.

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 18.—Tonight Brantford experienced one of the worst fires it has had for many years. At 9:30 fire was discovered coming out of the third story windows in the brick building of the Snowdrift Company on Dalhousie street. The firemen responded promptly and put eight streams of water on, but the fire had got great headway before it was noticed. They no sooner subdued one place than it burst out in another, sometimes in the cellar and again in the third story. They could make no headway with it and after an hour's hard fighting it burst through the roof.

Soon after this smoke was seen coming through the roof of the adjoining brick building of George Watts & Sons, wholesale grocers, corner of Dalhousie and King streets. It was not many minutes before there was a crash from the top of George Watts & Sons' store, the roof fell in and the front of the third story fell out across the street, causing a stampede among the spectators.

FIREMEN HURT.
With this wall falling out three firemen were more or less severely injured.

Brantford, Sept. 19.—At 1 a.m. the fire is still raging, but under control. R. M. Fuller, proprietor of the Snowdrift Company, owns the building. The loss will be in the neighborhood of $30,000. He carries an insurance of $100,000 on the building and $50,000 on the stock, which is a complete loss.

Geo. Watts & Sons, wholesale grocers, own the place. The loss of the insurance are not known. Roughly estimated it will be about $70,000. The building and stock are a complete loss.

When the walls fell it took telephone and electric light wires down, and the city is in darkness, the power being shut off.

ROCKFELLER HOUSE BURNED.
Tarrytown, N. Y., Sept. 17.—John D. Rockefeller's country seat at Pocantico Hills, was destroyed by fire tonight. The fire started in the housekeeper's apartments on the ground floor, and within two hours the walls of the building had fallen. Mr. Rockefeller was not there. It is said that he is in Iowa.

The explosion of an oil lamp is said to have started the fire. The house was situated on a hill about 500 feet high, and the fire department was practically powerless, as owing to the altitude, it was impossible to get any adequate water pressure.

Mr. Rockefeller bought the house about six years ago from Judge Wentworth, of New York. The house was plainly furnished. No one here tonight is able to give an estimate of the damage. The building itself was worth about $20,000.

FATAL FIRE IN TEXAS.
Brackettsville, Texas, Sept. 19.—Three persons lost their lives and one was seriously burned in a fire which destroyed the home of Bacon Cox yesterday. The dead: Nettie Cox, aged 13; May Cox, aged 10, and Tom Cox, aged 10.

The only inmate of the house who escaped death was an older sister of the victims, who was pulled out of the flames by persons who had responded to the alarm. Her injuries are serious but she may recover.

Hagyard's Yellow Oil is good for man or beast. Relieves pain, reduces swelling, allays inflammation, cures cuts, others fail.

Germany manufacturers of machinery have recently received orders for 100 locomotives, representing a value of 6,000,000 marks (nearly $1,500,000), which will go to Siam, Italy, India and Denmark.

Anyone troubled with boils, pimples, burns, bruises, sprains, stiff joints, rashes, festering sores or any chronic or malignant skin disease, should use Burdock Blood Bitters, externally, and take internally. It will cure where

The Stanfield Undershirt

Made without seams at shoulders. Will not twist on the body, yields to every motion giving free play to muscular development. They fit like an additional skin, always comfortable. Water improves.

Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear

Sold by first class dealers. The name "Stanfield" is on every garment.

LAZARRE

A Stirring Romance.

This popular and brilliant story, written by Mary Hartwell Catherwood, will be published

EACH SATURDAY

—IN THE—

LONDON ADVERTISER

The third installment will be found on page 12 of tomorrow's issue.

At a large expense the publishers of this paper have secured the rights for publication of this story in Canada. It has been one of the most successful novels of the present year.

NOTHING BUT PRAISE FOR LAZARRE

The latest success in the field of fiction.—Boston Herald.

A noble story, told with rare touches of splendor and pathos.—Chicago Journal.

Exceptionally good—strongly woven and singularly vivid.—Washington Star.

Two noble characters! Lazarre and the woman he loved.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Of all the novels of the year this has the most engaging subject.—Chicago Tribune.

An exquisite story, so charming, so ideal, that it disarms all criticism.—Minneapolis Times.

A story made picturesque by intensely original character creation.—St. Louis Republic.

So well balanced, so fine in diction, so complete in every way that it may well become a classic.—Indianapolis Journal.

Glorified by a beautiful love story.—Chicago Tribune.

We feel quite justified in predicting a widespread and prolonged popularity for this latest comer in the ranks of romantic fiction.—The New York Commercial Advertiser.

Nothing remains except to add a few more words of the same sort to the popular verdict.—Chicago Daily News.