

King Tut Creation Arrives Stamped In Lotus and Urns

Riot of Colors, But Wondrously Harmonious—Soft Tones Foil For Paisley and Egyptian This Spring.

The King Tut silks have arrived in town in wonderful weaves and amazing colorings. Even as shoppers and "just visitors" admire and marvel that the silk manufacturers revealed such keen news sense in selling upon the Egyptian motifs, they are prone to sigh and exclaim: "What a shame to disturb poor old Tut after all these years!"

Some, indeed, sound quite warmly indignant and use words like "sacrilege." Whatever may be the opinion with regard to courtesies due people some thousands of years dead, there's a fine agreement that the Egyptian vogues are lively enough to express springtime feelings and emotions, even if they do hark from the tombs. As soon as the news was broadcasted from Egypt by cable and wire of the remarkable discoveries some weeks ago, the designers of the manufacturers of fabrics evidently held them to museums to get better acquainted with mummy modes. The finished product, in the form of a frock all ready to be donned was on view yesterday afternoon in a big glass showcase in London.

The fabric was uncrushed crepe, and from bateau neck to hem it was a riot of lotus flowers, which gave forth all the colors of the spectrum and several variations on these. Planted here and there to lend a note of dignity were exact reproductions of Egyptian urns and jugs. Had time permitted to con them all over doubtless an ornate mummy casket would have been found some place in the archeological collection, tucked coquettishly under the arm or gazing out from a pleat to remind that time flies and man is mortal.

A relieving touch was afforded by tiny organly cuffs to finish the short sleeves, and a brief organly collar, meeting at the side between car and chin.

A side tie effect was achieved by two long ends of black crepe ribbon, caught in a coquettish breast pocket, with pointed tips, the flap fashioned from the printed crepe made into rings.

On the right side narrow pleats, forming a pocket, were caught by a larger, matching hip pocket. The surprising feature was that the frock managed to look quite harmonious, and not too loud at all for conservative taste, if a number of changes could be afforded. Such is the hypnotic influence of fashion.

Paisley Paradox Too.
The styles that bloom in the spring, traits, are eminently gay and festive, whether expressed in the fascinating paisley overblouses, the overblouses with saucy bandana collars, the paisley parols that are to be carried later, or in the flower garden effects on the hats. Not for many a season has the line been so distinctly drawn between the winter and the spring hat. The between season hat, or the shiny black, is another matter.

Just by way of variety, the softer tones also are immensely popular, as demonstrated in the fashion shows in progress. It's a lucky lady who can wear gray these days. For one reason, it is eminently correct. For another, it is eminently correct.

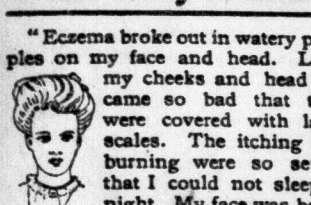

Mothers and Their Children

Weighing and Measuring the Child.

Regularity in weighing and measuring a child furnishes a pretty good guide to his physical condition. A child should be weighed and measured every month and a chart kept. Such a chart could be made out to furnish a record for a year. The child can be interested in this chart, and if he isn't "getting to be a big boy" as fast as he should, he will be more willing to eat more vegetables or learn whatever health habit is necessary to correct a poor record. The itching and burning were so severe that I could not sleep at night. My face was badly disfigured. My hair became dry and lifeless and fell out so that I had to have it cut off close to my scalp."

"A friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Elmer King, Box 278, Jackson St., Oxford, Nova Scotia.

Fashions by Wire

Special to The Advertiser.

Paris, March 7.—The hat and handbag should match, according to the latest decree of both modistes and milliners. This is an old fashion revived and one chic enough to be worth reviving; thus the tan felt hat with its flowing beige veil has its color note echoed in a tan suede handbag.

TRIM WITH LEATHER.

London, March 7.—Leather is still extremely popular today as a trimming. This is especially true of tailored suits, which burst out into leather bindings and buckles on the slightest provocation. One serge suit has long panels made up altogether of leather strips.

FLOWER GARDEN HATS.

London, March 7.—Shining, silky straws and quantities of flowers mark some of the new hats just shown here. Flowers seem likely to be more in vogue than for many seasons, despite the present insistence on ribbons and bows. Among the predicted vogues is that of the hat with the flower crown.

WEARS GAY PETTICOAT.

New York, March 7.—Petticoats having come in again with the wide skirts have come in also with a pleasant smartness of color. They are to be had today in changeable silks and satins, turquoise and gold, mauve and pale blue, also magenta and silver. Sometimes they are strewn with big flowers.

UMBRELLA IS STUBBY.

New York, March 7.—It is hard to keep up with the styles in umbrellas. But at the moment they are short and stocky, with the stubbiest sort of ferrules and handles. The handles are likely to be enameled or carved, although the clear amber handle is still in favor.

LUCAN PUPILS MISSED.

The following pupils of Miss B. M. Bonn, Lucan, are receiving congratulations on their success at the recent examinations of the London Conservatory of Music: Grade I.—Maurice Roy (first-class honors), Doris Weir (honors), Margaret Whalen (honors). Grade II.—Annie Whalen, Grade IV.—Marie Carroll.

THE ETERNAL QUESTION

by Felice Davis

LOVE'S LABOR LOST.

Doris—Louis, I hear you are to play Romeo in the club theatricals!

Louis—Yep—how'd you like to be Juliet?

Doris—You as Romeo will be a scream!

Louis—Well, thank you! What's the matter with me?

Doris—Why, there's no more feeling in you than a stone!

Louis—Not a bit! You don't know any more about making love to a woman than a frog!

Louis—What makes you think so?

Doris—Well, I know the opportunities you've had—

Louis—? Opportunities? If you are Romeo I predict a frost!

Doris—Well, you know a man must be inspired by the other sex if he is going to be a real lover!

Doris—Haven't you ever been inspired?

Louis—I've been inspired right here in this house!

Doris—Oh, really, have you?

Louis—Yes! Yes!

Doris—The woman that caused it I want!

Louis—Yes! I want to be my—

Doris—Yes! To be your—

Louis—Wife!

Doris—Why, I would be—

Louis—And I told her so last night. Here she comes now—your pretty young sister Beatrice!

Doris—What?

Louis—And I put enough feeling and sentiment into it so that she accepted me!

Doris—What?

Louis—Well, I know the opportunities you've had—
