MONSTROUS TRAGEDY.

THE BLOOD-THIRSTY MURDERER KILLED IN COLD BLOOD.

News of the Tragedy—Maber the name of the murderer.

The scene of a horrible double murder reached the city from Burlington Saturday morning.

A World reporter immediately went to the scene of tragedy in Nelson township and ascertained full particulars of the bloody deed.

The victims were an old man named Maber and his daughter, who is in custody and has made a confession. The details are of a diabolical character.

BEFORE THE TRAGEDY. Patrick Maber and his son and daughter lived in a two-roomed log cabin in the township of Nelson, six miles from Burlington, and two miles north-east of Watapee.

The father was 84 years of age, and unable to support himself, having been in the receipt of aid from the municipality for many years. His son Patrick farmed 22 acres of rented land and kept horses.

Both father and daughter were quiet and inoffensive in their nature. About four weeks ago, however, Maber and Michaelourke, went into partnership to cut wood for a neighboring farmer.

Rourke, who is 25 years of age, was unmarried, and was a native of Watapee. On Thursday last Rourke quit work and was paid off.

The next day he went to Nelson village and drank and smoked until he was in a state of intoxication. He then returned to his father's place and threatened to murder some one before the night was over.

Young Maber started out into the bush and cut wood all Friday morning. At noon he went to Watapee to engage another man in Rourke's place, leaving his father and sister alone. This was the situation of affairs before

THE TRAGEDY. Young Maber was the first to know of the bloody affair. He story to The World reporter is as follows: I returned home on the night of Friday night and rapped at the door two or three times without getting an answer.

Then I went to the window and looked in and saw that Rourke opened the door and said "I'll let you in soon enough" and struck me with an axe he had in his hand, cutting down my neck, I said "what do you mean, Mike?" and he struck me over the head with his heavy stick, knocking him down, and he was saying "I'll kill you, you," and then he got up and ran away.

I went to Mr. Shanahan's, a neighbor, and told them my father and sister were killed. He called Dr. McLaughlin, and he found my father lying in the kitchen in a pool of blood with his head split open. Bridget was in her neck. Both were dead.

AFTER THE TRAGEDY. The first thing young Maber did was to alarm the neighbors, several of whom were on the track of the murderer, but they did not find him until he was in the woods near Watapee and informed constable Rourke and afterwards notified coroner Richardson at Burlington.

On the next day a party of people visited the scene of the tragedy Saturday. The interior of the house presented a ghastly sight. On the floor on his right side, with both arms upraised and his hands clenched, his head was covered with blood. On the floor on his left side, with both arms upraised and his hands clenched, his head was covered with blood.

The floor bore pools of blood in several places, one particularly large. On the wall, one party saw a hole, and it was supposed the murderer had fled from there. The floor bore pools of blood in several places, one particularly large.
