The World's Telephone Call is 523. SATURDAY MORNING, DEC. 26 1885.

There is but one man in all Teronto who is truly good and honest and God-fearing, and he is William H. Howland; and G. Maclean Rose, the Creaking Grip, Henry O'Brien, J. J. McLaren and that ilk are his prophets. At least we are to believe that such is the case from the speeches of Mr. Howland and his friends. The city council, so they tell us, is a den of thieves; sand-baggers and thuge infest the streets; Mayor Manning is a brewer, the tool of rumsellers and the modern Ahab; any man who dares to oppose Mr. Howland and to support the present mayor is an enemy to morality, a friend of evil, the consort of publicans and the companion of sinners; and a newspaper that would uphold him is thus spoken of by Grip: Mr. Manning is ably backed by The World, a sheet that would certainly be out of place if supporting an honest and high-minded man.

These self-righteous citizens, these imputers of dishonest, sinful and impious otives to whomsoever is on the other side, are or have been, many of them, no better than they ought, and certainly they are men whose lives and acts when impartially compared with those whom they denounce come out of it rather worse

Mere morality, the kind that men wear on their sleeves, is not the only issue in this contest. For citizens and taxpayers Captain Davidson fully concurred in these the issue is one of civic administration, of public improvements, of economy, and of value for outlay. Now, if the advocates of Mr. Howland will give more time to these questions they will get a better hearing, and the result will be that Mr. Howland will only be beaten by hundreds instead of by thousands if they pursue fenceless, "Why," said a gentleman in present tactics.

OBJECTING TO THE ELECTRIC

Thieves Don't Like it—It Discourages Im mo ality—Corner Loafers Against It— It Disturbs the Policeman's Dreams, Commendation of the electric light is so requently heard in our city that many seple may not be aware of the strong option to it which exists in many quar ters. Chief Willard of the police force, in onversation with an Express reporter the other day, made some of these objections very clear. "I am not prepared to say," he replied to an inquiry, "to what extent the lighting of the streets has diminished orime in this city. You could not tell very well by comparing the number of arrests under the new system and the old, because a crook is nuch more likely to fall into the hands of he police at night now than formerly. Thieves are very warmly opposed to the lectric light. A man with a bundle of swag' can be seen at night several blocks Crooks from other cities complain bitterly of the electric light. Formerly they could easily escape recognition at

AN INDUSTRY PARALYZED. "Perhaps," continued O ief Willard, the class which most strongly objects to the electric light is that which fills the disorderly houses of this city. The light hurts the business of street-walkers in more ways than one. These women incur nuch greater risks of arrest now than formerly, because it is much easier to watch their actions. Men who desire maintain a respectable reputation are also deterred from responding to the attention of the fallen. They can never tell when they will be unexpectedly detected by friends and acquaintances, or by the police. The streets where the women live are so well lighted that visitors incur a great risk of detection. Many favorite meeting places up-town are broken up because the street corners are flooded with light."
