AT THE UNION.

Presbyterian Meeting-Inaugural Meeting of the School Board.

At the annual meeting of the Presbyterian Church, the reports of the Ladies' Aid, Women's Foreign Mission Society, etc., were highly satisfactory. The Ladies' Aid have undertaken to place one of the 5000 painted glass windows in the new church; $300 have already been raised. It is understood the Y.P.M.S. will provide another window. The new church will cost, when completed, about $24,000, including seating, heating, frescoing, windows and the organ. The contract price for the church proper is $22,000, and it will be completed for about that amount. The present church property when sold will realize, it is estimated, $9000, which will reduce the indebtedness to $23,000. Messrs. R. L. McCormack and P. Ellis retired from the board in order to be able to devote more time to the Building Committee. The new board is as follows: John Steward, Dr. F. S. B. Reid, J. A. Fisher, A. B. Rice, A. Jenner, J. W. Abernethy, R. D. Laidlaw, F. W. Wagner and T. Sheppard.

At the inaugural meeting of the School Board, Dr. Harris was elected chairman and James A. Hayes, secretary-treasurer. The board will meet on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month. Dr. Cleland gave notice of a motion to the effect that only teachers holding second-class certificates be employed in the future.

An important real estate deal has taken place. Mr. J. B. Bruce sold his Dundas street block of four stores, at the corner of Victoria street, to Senator McKenzie for $24,000.

At the meeting of the Waterworks Committee, Councillor Hart gets the chairmanship of the Property Committee.

An improved street railway car. A very fine 16-foot car has been about completed by the Toronto Railway Company at their shops, corner of Frederick and Front streets. The car is 10 inches higher than any car now in use, and is tastefully arranged and finished. The interior is finished in oak, relieved with cherry. The ceiling has much the appearance of a railway carriage. The windows are larger and less numerous. The seats are cushioned with figure plush instead of the plain crimson. The mirrors are so arranged that passengers when sitting in their seats can look at themselves and their companions. The hand straps are padded, that they may be easier on the hand. The exterior of the car is painted a "caneau" red and striped with gold. The lettering is also in gold, the name of the route being painted on the side of the car. The name of the route is also on a glass over the door in such a position that it can be seen and read straight. There is also a great improvement in the steps. The one used on the car is of cast iron, and is made of perforated steel similar in style to that often seen in steel door mats. This, it is thought, will reduce the danger of slipping. Provision has been left for the change from horse power to electricity.

James Cullen, Foot's Island, N.F., writes: "I have been watching the progress of Dr. Thomas' Emulsion since its introduction to this place, and with much pleasure I have seen the success have been fully realized. It has not only cured a few of my 'rheumatic' neighbors, but has also cured a number of the most stubborn cases of rheumatism. I have brought before the public. Your medicine does not require any longer a sponsor, but if you wish me to attest such, I shall be only too happy to have my name connected with your preparation."

The Museum's Quarters.

The Building and Museum Committee of the Library Board has awarded contracts as follows for the alterations to the building: Masonry, Robert Clayton, $250; carpenter work, George Rathbone, $100; heating and plumbing, Robert Watson, $607; plumbing and steam-fitting, Keith & Pittsford, $200; painting, Charles Harvey, $720; iron work, the St. Lawrence Foundry, $250, and electric lighting, $900.

COMPLEMENTARY QUALITIES.

Men and Women Fall in Love with the Traits They Have Not.

The prohibition of the Church is scarcely needed to prevent a man from marrying his grandmother. Morality has always borne a special grudge to pretty faces, but as Mr. Herbert Spencer admirably puts it (long before the appearance of Darwin's selective theory), "the saying that beauty is but skin deep is itself but a skin deep saying."

In reality, beauty is one of the best guides we can possibly have to the desirability, so far as race preservation is concerned, of any man or any woman as a partner in marriage.

A fine form, a good figure, a beautiful bust, a round arm and neck, a fresh complexion, a lovely face, are all outward and visible signs of the physical qualities that, on the whole, enable us to make up a healthy and vigorous wife and mother; they imply soundness, fertility, a good circulation, a good digestion.

Conversely, sallowness and paleness are roughly indicative of dyspepsia and anemia. A flat chest is a symptom of deficient maturity, and what we call a bad figure is really, in one way or another, an unsightly departure from the mental moral standard of the race.

Good teeth mean good digestion; a clear eye means an active liver. Scrubbiness and undernourishment mean feeble vitality. Nor are indications of mental and moral efficiency by any means wanting in recognized elements in personal beauty. A good-humored face is in itself almost pretty. A pleasant smile half redeems unattractive features.

Low, receding foreheads strike us unfavorably. Heavy, stolid, half-idiotic countenances can never be beautiful, however regular their lines and contours.

Intelligence and goodness are almost as necessary as health and vigor in order to make up our perfect idea of a beautiful human face and figure.

The Apollo Belvedere is no fool; the murderers in the chamber of horrors at Mine Tusaad's are, for the most part, no beauties.

What we all fall in love with, then, as a race, in most cases, efficiency and ability. What we seek fall in love with individually is, I believe, our moral, mental and physical complement.

Not our like, nor our counterpart; quite the contrary, within healthy limits, our unlike and our opposite. That it is so has long been more or less a commonplace of ordinary conversation; that it is scientifically true, one time with another, when we take an extended range of cases, may, I think, be almost demonstrated by sure and certain warranty of human nature.

Brothers and sisters have more in common, mentally and physically, than other members of the same race can possibly have with one another. But nobody falls in love with his sister. A profound instinct has taught even the lower race of men, for the most part, to avoid such union of the all-but-identical.

In the higher races the idea never so much as occurs to us. Even cousins seldom fall in love--seldom, that is to say, in comparison with the frequent opportunities of intercourse they enjoy relatively to the remainder of the species.

When they do, and when they carry out their perilsous choice effectively by marriage, natural selection soon avenges nature upon the individual choice. In narrow communities, where breeding-in-and-in is almost inevitable, natural selection has similarity to exert itself upon a crowd of relatives, and helpless incapables.

But in widespread open champagne countries, where individual choice has free room for exercise, men and women, as a rule (if not constrained by parents and moralists), marry for love, and marry, on the whole, their natural complements. They prefer outsiders, fresh blood, somebody from beyond the community, to the people of their own immediate surroundings.

As every man who turned to marriage among the folk with whom they have been brought up amounts almost to a positive instinct; they feel it is impossible to fall in love with a fellow-townswoman as to fall in love with their own first cousins.

Among exogamous tribes such an instinct--aided, of course, by other extraneous causes--has hardened into custom; and there is no reason to believe (from the universal traces among the higher civilizations of marriage by capture) that all the leading races of the world are ultimately derived from exogamous ancestors possessing this healthy and excellent sentiment.

In minor matters it is, of course, universally admitted that short men as a rule prefer tall women, while tall men admire little women. Dark pairs by preference with fair; the commonplace often runs after the original.

People have long noticed that this attraction toward one's opposite, tends to keep true the standard of the race; they have not, perhaps, so generally observed that it also indicates roughly the existence in either individual a desire for its own natural complement.

It is difficult here to give definite examples, but everybody knows how, in the physical and mental, which strikes us exactly because of their adaptation to form with ourselves an adequate union.

Of course, we do not definitely seek out and discover such qualities; instinct works far more intuitively than that, but we find at subsequent observation, how true and trustworthily were its immediate indications.

That is to say, those men who do so were wise enough or fortunate enough to follow the earliest promptings of their own hearts, and not to divest themselves of the deepest of human intuitions, love at first sight.--Pittsburg Bulletin.

Notes of Notabilities.

Sir Edwin Arnold is personally conducted on his present tour of the States. He travels on schedule time, takes the hotel apartments that have been ordered for him and follows the directions of the courier, otherwise known as the manager of the lecture course.

The late Earl of Bantley was the owner of 70,000 acres in the County Cork. His grandfather obtained a peerage for his exertions in repelling the French invasion at Bantley Bay about a century ago.

Story, the sculptor, and Mr. Hoekke, the banker, are among the most conspicuous Americans in Rome, the latter gentleman having lived in the Eternal City about forty years. The American colony there numbers about 2,000.

Little by Little.

If you are gaining little by little every day be content. Are your expenses less than your income, so that you are yet constantly accumulating? Be content; so far as concerns money you are doing well.

Are you gaining knowledge every day? Though it be little by little, the aggregate of accumulation, when no day is permitted to pass without adding something to the stock, will be surprising to yourself.

Solomon did not become the wisest man in the world in a minute.

Little by little fortunes are accumulated; little by little knowledge is gained; little by little character and reputation are achieved.

Beyond Calculation!

It is unwise and foolish to continue sick and ailing when you have within your reach such an alluring remedy as Filling's Compound. Its cost is trifling, and its benefits are beyond calculation.

A Pleasant Result.

DEAN SUGG. Two years ago I was very ill with jaundice and tried many medicines, which did me no good. I then took Filling's Compound. Its cost is trifling, and its benefits are beyond calculation.
