THE BEST USE OF OUR STRENGTH.

Two extremes are to be avoided in our daily round of duties and in our circle of opportunities. One relates to the spending our strength wholly upon the minor demands of our station, and the other to centering our activities chiefly on what we regard as our larger obligations. Each duty has its exact place and measure. The homely performance is relatively entitled to as much recognition as the more conspicuous. There is nothing petty in any duty which God lays upon us. He divides our work into what we call the little things and the great things of life, but it is only when we put faith, conscience, love, devotion and fidelity into every undertaking that we get the best out of existence for ourselves, secure the richest benefits to others and most advance the divine glory,
