and openly fet himself up to oppose every Opinion of his R-I M-r.

The Observation of this Conduct, naturally moved his  to entertain more favourable Sentiments of G-le and B-b: The Success of Dettengben improved that Disposition, and the wonderful Amendment in our foreign Affairs, from the Commencement of the War to that Time, increased his Opinion of their Abilities, and augmented his natural Contempt for the inconfiftent Half Measures, and Middle-Principles, contended for by the troo B -- rs.

But what effectually extinguished the Remains of his * * * * * * * Regard for them, was their Conduct in respect to the Propositions made by the Emperor at Hanau. Till then their Obstructions to the Meafures of the War admitted some Possibility, of doubt, whether it might not proceed from real and honest Opinion: But when the pacific M—rs were the Men to oppose this Pacific Measure, in which both * himself and G would have willingly concurred, if it had not been rejected by them, to whom it was fent over for their Approbation, it was evident, that they acted upon no Principles either as to Peace or War; and that their fole Object was to defeat any Measures whether of Peace or War, whether right or wrong, by which the new Minister might establish his Credit with his Muster, or his Interest in the Nation.

It is now known, that this Accommodation might have been obtained at that Time, for the fingle Condition of furnishing an annual Subsidy, to support the Emperor, of about 100000 l. Sterling, for fix Years, or thereabouts, till Bavaria could recover the Desolation and Devastation of the War: And, on the other Part, the Emperor offered to withdraw his Forces from the French, to give his Daughter in Marriage to the Arch-Duke, and to
