

Caius Julius Cæsar invaded Britain, . . . . .	B.C.
Civil War between Pompeius and Cæsar, in which Cæsar was conqueror at the Battle of Pharsalia,	54
Caius Julius Cæsar put himself at the head of the Government of Rome, . . . . .	49-48
Caius Julius Cæsar was murdered, . . . . .	48-44
Marcus Antonius, Caius Octavianus, and Marcus Lepidus gained the chief power in the Roman State, . . . . .	44
Octavianus defeated Antonius at Actium, and be- came the chief man in Rome, . . . . .	43
Octavianus, known as Augustus Cæsar, governed the Roman Republic as Emperor, . . . . .	31
	B.C. 30-14 A.D.
Tiberius Emperor, . . . . .	14-37
Caius Cæsar (Caligula) Emperor, . . . . .	37-41
Tiberius Claudius Cæsar Emperor, . . . . .	41-54
Nero Claudius Cæsar Emperor, . . . . .	54-68
Disturbances in the Empire after the fall of the Julian family, . . . . .	69
Titus Flavius Vespasianus, known as Vespasian, Emperor, . . . . .	69-79
Destruction of Jerusalem, . . . . .	70
Titus Flavius Vespasianus, known as Titus, Em- peror, . . . . .	79-81
Lucius Flavius Domitianus, known as Domitian, Emperor, . . . . .	81-96
Ulpian Trajanus Emperor, . . . . .	98-117
Publius Ælius Hadrianus Emperor, . . . . .	117-138
Titus Ælius Antoninus, known as Antoninus Pius, Emperor, . . . . .	138-161
Marcus Aurelius Antoninus,—the first Emperor who had to spend his time in fighting against barbarian invaders, . . . . .	161-180
The Emperors were elected by the soldiers, and barbarian tribes invaded the frontiers, . . . . .	192-268
The Emperor Caracalla made all men who were governed by Rome citizens of Rome, . . . . .	215
A series of Emperors chosen from Illyria drove back the invaders, . . . . .	268-284
The Emperor Diocletian made great changes in The Roman Empire, . . . . .	284-305