Mr. Cronyn professed a leaning towards free trade, but said he would not urge any great change in the tariff during the war. It would not be desirable to do anything that would in any degree take away from parliament its control over those who manufacture and sell goods. It was recognized, he said, that no nation can take a successful part in the war unless it is highly organized in an industrial way.

He asked the government to consider the advisability of forming a permanent tariff commission.

Mr. Cronyn, in concluding, declared that the country was prepared to actually and a series of the country was prepared to actually adds strength would be greatly increased.

Endeavor to bring the session to an early close is indicated in a motion of which the government has given notice. The motion calls for morning sittings of the house, commencing Friday, and for Saturday sittings commencing Saturday next.

The budget debate was resumed this afternoon by Major Hume Cronyn, Unionist member for London, who to some extent discussed the financial situation. Mr. Trahan complained that the government had not preserved Canadian credit. Trade had considerably increased in value but not in volume. The increase was mainly derived from the high price of certain articles. He thought that the government could have done more to stabilize excange with the United States. Since the out break of war, Dominion notes in circulation had been increased by $142,000,000. In August, 1914, for each dollar of Dominion notes there full guarantee of 86 cents. By March 1918, the gold guarantee had dropped to 47 cents. "We must not therefore be surprised," Mr. Trahan went on, "if the current rate of exchange is so badly against us. The government should cease to finance the war with paper. It will create more depreciation and economic tension, and if the government continues to increase this circulation without adopting proper means it will make trouble worse than Develop Mining Resources.

Manion (Fort William and River) urged the development of the mining resources of the Do-minion. Raw materials, he said, would rule the world of commerce after the war. Canada possessed these, but she lacked a national awakening that would inspire her people to a due appreciation of her importance. Dr. Marion declared his belief that there hundreds of millions of tons of iron ore scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Along the north shore of Lake Superior, on the Canadian Northern line, east and west, at Port Arthur and Fort William, were immense iron resources.

As to methods, Dr. Manion suggested that a bounty of so much per ton on all iron produced from Canadian mines and smelted in Canada would be the most reasonable and the least danger-

Not everything however, for Captage was continued in the house today. The discussion ranged widely. Opposition criticism generally favored the imposition of still higher taxes on flarge incomes. Mr. McCoig, of Kent, held the view that the tax on food profitness should have been made retroactive, "for the benefit of videous and orphans." Mr. Trahan, of Nicolet disapproved of the increased circulation of Dominion notes. "The government," he deads with paper." And Mr. Dutremblay suggested that if the government found it necessary to feat another loan the rate of interest should be 3½ per cent., as paid by the United States on its loans.

Up to this time the opposition has offered no amendment, but one will no doubt be offered calling for free agricultural implements. It will be hard for some of the western supporters of the government to oppose this amendment. Again Dr. Blake of North Winnipeg advocated a tax of five mills on the dollar upon land. He thought such a tax could be easily and cheaply collected thru and by the various municipalities. He also wanted a heavier tax upon profits and incomes, and would take for the state the excess over $50,000 a year. He even went so far as to advocate that no man should ask for more than a bare living during the war, no matter how much money he might be making. Messieurs Trahan of Nicolet and Dutremblay of Montreal, criticised the budget, and read extracts from speeches delivered by Hon. A. K. Maclean when he was in opposition. Mr. Maclean as financial critic for the opposition had to find fault year after year with the budgets brought down by Sir Thomas White. little foreseeing that in 1915 he would bring down a budget of his own as the deputy of Sir Thomas. Still it must be admitted that A. K. was always a mild critic, and his speeches in the past do not furnish much ammunition which can now be used he expressed the opinion that the non-taxable provisions should be withdrawn, and also the convertible feartures of the issues should be dropped.

Significant News Develops in Discussion in Saxon Parliament.

Amsterdam, May 1.—The significant dmission that the Imperial German Government had been discussing the future of Alsace-Lorraine was made recently in the second chamber of the Saxon Parliament by one of the ministers, says a ment by one of the ministers, says a Dresden despatch to The Rotterdamsche Courant. The minister who made the admission was Herr von Leipzig, in reply to a suggestion by Herr Guenther, a Liberal minister. Guenther urged that Alsace be incorporated with Bavaria and that Lorraine be divided between Prussia and Baden, all contingent upon the assent of the country and the parliament. Herr von Leipzig then said that while it was true the imperial government had discussed the subject a stage had not been reached where definite proposals could be made to the federal council. The speaker continued:

could be made to the federal council. The speaker continued:
"The manner in which Alsace and Lorraine hitherto has been attached to Germany has not stood the test and it is impossible to attempt to continue to build on this basis. The Saxon Government also is convinced of this, but it has not yet been decided how the question as a whole can be solved."

This answer did not satisfy the house.

the government to meet expenses this year was $1,187,000,000. The deficit, he said, would be about $467,000,000, which was due partly to the extravagance of the present government and that which had preceded it since the year 1911.

The high cost of living engaged the attention of the speaker, who drew the attention of the house to what had been accomplished in the direction of controlling prices by an Australian commission. One of the accomplishments of this commission had been to keep the price of flour at a reasonable figure.

Should increase Production.

J. F. Reid (Mackenzle) declared that Canada could not make a better contribution to the cause for which the alliest are fighting than by increasing production. The removal of the duty on farm implements, he thought, would increase the efficiency of the farmers. Production would be increased more by this means than by any other.

Mr. Reid said that the tariff commission suggested by Mr. Hume Cronyrn would be very acceptable to the farmers in the west.

Another plea for free agricultural implements was made by Captain Read (Prince, P.E.I.) who followed. He declared that if ever there was a time to be found in the house.

Captain Read made a strong appeal for the remission of the duty on potations and vegetables, so that the samplus of these products in Prince Edward Island might find its way to the markets of the United States.
