Referring to the razors supplied the army, he aid he did not know how much, was paid for them, but if the price was a nickel it was too much. He next dealt with the manner in which the election was conducted overseas.

Great difficulty had been experienced in teaching the Canadian soldiers to use the "dirty" tricks of bayonet and hand-to-hand fighting, which had to be employed to meet the Hun at his own game, but the Union Government had had no compunction about using the most ruthless methods in the overseas election. Not one lota of information concerning Sir Wilfrid Laurier and him policy was allowed to reach the troops, but they were paraded daily and lectured on the necessity for conscription, being promised three months; leave of absence if it passed. Persistent efforts to link up Sir Wilfrid with Bourassa and Lavergne also were mismanaged, he charged, and gratuities have been wrongly divided. Ranks

Pensions Mismanaged,
Awarding of the pensions has been mismanaged, he charged, and gratuities have been wrongly divided. Ranks above that of captain lost nothing by their war service, and some of them made more than they would have in civilian occupation, but from the rank of captain downwards they lost money. No objection was made to this while the war was on, but the policy was carried on when gratuities were paid. The privates received six months' pay of $70, while brigadler-generals received $17 a day for the same period. All these matters were making the returned men hope for the day when there would be a government at Ottawa which would listen to them.

PARIS, Nov. 5 .- Great Britain, France and Italy have signed a tripartite agreement in which they undertake to support each other in maintaining their "sphere of influence in Turkey." The limits of the areas in which the respective special interests of France and Italy are recognized are defined by the same document. The document is to come into force and be published at the time of the Turkish peace treaty goes into effect. This date is still an uncertainty. While the treaty defines the spheres of influence of France and Italy, recognizing the special interests of France in Cilicia and the western part of Kurdistan, bordering on Syria and of Italy in southern Anatolia, the British sphere of influence are not undefined but are not referred to. This has raised the question if the agreement is susceptible of the interpretation that the British interests may be hld to extend to any or all the remaining parts of

WHISKEY WAS BAD; PURCHASERS ANGRY

MONTREAL, Nov. 5.—Giving evidence today in the case being tried here against J. A. Pesant and R. Ricci, accused of having secured $15,000 by false pretenses in a bad whiskey deal with Detroit parties, J. Boscovitch, an intermediary in the deal declared that on another occasion he had shipped 100 cases to friends in Windsor. The whiskey, which had been bought by him from Pesant and Ricci as genuine, proved so bad that his friends came to Montreal and threatened to kill him. He had refunded the purchase price, $6,000, though he only got back $4,000 from the defendants, who told him to take it and shut up.

The speaker then proceeded to outline the history of the U. F. O. representative's candidature. Mr. McDermand was the Liberal choice for the Provincial Legislature. He believed that the women voters should be given an opportunity to indorse his candidature.
They were, but they didn't.
Prominent Conservatives promised him the U. F. O. nomination, but once more he missed connections, being promised the federal nomination if he would withdraw from the provincial contest.

"The Conservatives knew that Marshall nor any other Government candidate could win this riding while the Liberals remained united, but if they could divide them in some manner they would be pretty sure of it," Mr. Charlton asserted. "So they played Mr. McDermand. He fell for their play, and Sir Adam was at his home in London, Ont., today, and Sir William MacKenzie was in Montreal.

Off Good Foundations.

The candidate next dealt with the general principles of politics, declaring that the preseent restlessness was not due to false foundations, but to the fact that humanity had moved off good foundations. Liberalism was one of these foundations. It was based on the broad principle of the brotherhood of man. Such a principle was the only one which cour create a united Canada from the diverse elements existing in it.

Liberalism stood for equality of opportunity which, he pointed out, was considerably different from equality of condition. The latter was an impracticable idea, although it was advocated by "Mr. McDermand's Socialist friends from St. Thomas." So long as every man was given an equal opportunity it rested with his ability what he made of it.

had been srystalized in the kaiser, but that was not democracy. Its true definition was a state of government in which the principle sentiment was that the people governed themselves for their best interests.

Dealing with fiscal issues, he pointed out that Canada derived only 13 per cent of its revenue by direct taxation, while England derived 78 per cent and the United States 58 per cent. Protection of any kind, he contended, was favoritism, and Mr. Meighen's moderate protectionism was merely merely "moderate favoritism." It was the same principle as would be applied to the sickly child of the family. Canadian industries were not in this class, he contended, when manufacturers could live in palaces.
