"Lyrics. Songs and Sonnets." The volume of poems by Amos H. Chandler and Charles Pelham Mulvany, announced some time ago, has, at last appeared, and more than fulfils all expectations. It is an achievement of which all Canadians have cause to be proud, and contains poems that rank with the mature work of the leading English and American poets. Mr. Mulvany's writings have long been held in the highest estimation at Dublin University, and in the pleasant circles, some of his "society verses" have already been noticed in the ADVANCE, and in this class of composition probably he has no superior in America. In weighty subjects he has made the days of the latter Empire peculiarly his own, and such lyrics as "Messalina," "Theodora," "Ephraim," and "In Nero's Gardens," are masterpieces of dramatic strength and musical versification. Take any lines from the latter poem, which describes with fearful vividness a night scene in the pleasure gardens of the mighty Voluptuary, and illuminated by living torches—Christians smeared with pitch, "to pillars of stone torn fast—"

Imports and exports and other signs indicate a revival of trade, but the depression lately perceived in revenue continues unabated. The estimate of income laid before the last Parliament will probably not be exceeded. This late season for the condition of India remains recently made known, will require special attention. A policy of Confederation in South Africa is advised, but the Transvaal will be retained. Lord Granville said the Government had abandoned the coercion Act in the hope that the people would answer their appeal. He regretted that the Government had concluded not to renew the Coercion Act, and account of many outrages against life and property taking place in Ireland. He said the present state of affairs necessitated the continuance of the Act. More Backslidings and Debt. For the last two years it has been almost impossible to obtain the smallest sum for the most important service in the Eastern Provinces. Where some expenses were unavoidable a few thousands, or a few hundred dollars were gradually appropriated. But in the Far West the present Government are liberal to extravagance. They have undertaken to build a new Province building, and a new Government House for Manitoba at a very considerable cost. Mr. Angus suggested that as New Brunswick has lost its office Province Building by fire, and as it is now very poor, the Dominion should be as generous to it as it is to Manitoba, but the proposition was treated as if it must be a joke.

The Boat Race. (Continued from first page.) On the Virginia side of the course, opposite Georgetown, the shore is high and mostly wooded, with here and there lovely little open glades. An amateur one of these beautiful little islands such as the traveler always expects to find in the States, is to be seen in the distance, rising gently toward the horizon and presenting a pastoral landscape of unsurpassed loveliness. In the lazy distance, and on the crest of the ridge, Fort Whipple breaks the horizon, just for here and there a tall of Oregan, or two or three planters' residences, would make an all too broken, though gently undulating line in the far-off distance. Nearer the river and where the heights are more abrupt in their rise toward the horizon, the broad, level table of Arlington House may be seen, lifting its grey, weather-stained head from out of a leafy bow of richest emerald. This was once the home of the great grandchild of Martha Washington and her husband, the first of the great Presidents of the United States. The saddest of recollections cluster so thickly around this lovely spot that every breeze that has swept its beautiful slope might have been freighted with sighs, and every leaf bedewed with tears. In their last residence, 15,000 soldiers who fell in the frightful slaughter along the Potomac and its immediate vicinity, and these 2,111 are from the field of Bull Run and the route to Rappahannock. Further south the shore becomes, low, flat, and level, but the great bridge that spans the Potomac just below the turning buoy will be remembered as that upon which the broken and shattered columns of the Federal army crossed the Potomac in their flight from the disastrous retreat of the 22nd of September. As seen from the river, the course is nearly a straight line from the Annapolis boat-house to the turning buoy. The current in the river is very slight, and the rise and fall of the tide very insignificant.

THE BOAT RACE. After trying various boats with this race, and after the experience with shells turned out by the most prominent boat-builders of the New and Old World, Hanlan made up his mind that the George Warren, built of white cedar by Mr. George Warren, of Toronto, was the best he ever met in the race. This little craft is thirty feet six inches long, with eleven and a quarter inches breadth of beam, and weighs, with outriggers and all ready for the water, a shade less than twenty-eight pounds. For this the George Warren appears to be exceptionally strong, stiff, and seaworthy. Courtney pulled a paper boat thirty feet long, with eleven and a quarter inches breadth of beam, and weighing twenty-nine pounds.

Fatal Accident on the Intercolonial. What proved to be a fatal accident occurred on the Intercolonial Railway, at Sussex, last evening about six o'clock. When the Moncton freight arrived at Sussex at about that hour, it was necessary to detach a car from the train, and Judge Paul, a workman on the train, went between the cars for this purpose. He removed the pin connecting the cars, and telling another workman to signal the driver to go ahead, commenced to mount one of them, in doing which he must have lost his footing or his hold in some way. He fell, and (as he explained himself afterwards) tried to throw himself onto the rail and thought he had succeeded. Unfortunately, however, the advancing wheel caught his right foot, and passed over it, while the left foot, it is thought, finished the work, catching him by the ankle. He was thrown into the air, and the injured man brought on to Moncton in the express, which arrives here at 9:05. Drs. Chandler and Ross being notified in advance to be in attendance to amputate. When the injured man reached Moncton, he appeared to be in a terrible condition, and his groanings and twitches indicated that he was suffering a great deal. He was conveyed to his residence on High street on a stretcher, but was not in a condition to undergo an operation. He continued alive till a quarter of three this morning, when he died, never having rallied from the shock.

The Quebec Labor Troubles. The following pastoral was read in the Roman Catholic Churches Quebec on Sunday of last week. M. L. ALEXANDRE TARDIEU, by the grace of God, and of the Apostolic See, Archbishop of Quebec, To the faithful of the City of Quebec and environs, Greeting and Blessing in Our Lord: We have heard with grief, Our Dear Brethren, that during the last week serious troubles have occurred in this city and environs, and that in spite of the warnings of the civil authorities, these troubles are likely to continue to the great detriment of souls and temporal damage to our city.
