PREMIER ASQUITH DEVELOPING INTO A FINE TACTICIAN

Naval Intriguers are Trying to Force Beresford's Resignation.

NEW YORK, July 14.—The London correspondent o fthe Tribune cables as follows: Premier Asquith's management of public business is complimented by the fiercest opponents of the Liberal policy. The ministry will have a good record for legislative efficiency when Parliament rises on August 1, and will have the important measures so well advanced that an autumn session can easily be justified. The Prime Minister's dexterity has enabled him to send to the Lords the old age pension scheme against which only ten votes were recorded in the Commons and it is not likely that any attempt will be made to amend it.

Yet it is a crude measure which has not been thought out in detail is markedly inferior to the German insurance system and will require many modifications when it is in operation. Nobody knows what it will cost nor how the money can be raised, nor does any one doubt that the scheme will be enlarged in the near future, and made more burdensome to the taxpayers even if some adaption of the German contributary method be incorporated with it. A leap in the dark follows a game of blind man's buff, yet Mr. Asquith has the prestige of a successful leader, receives adulation from his former associates at the bar and is generally regarded as a clever tactician.

Desperate efforts have been made by naval partisans to goad Lord Charles Beresford into an indiscretion of some kind. Unlike General Buller, he has remained silent instead of losing his temper and plunging into retirement. He will have a case for heavy damages if it turns out that the charge that he was as reckless as Admiral Tryon in giving orders for the manoeuvres of battleships is unfounded. He will also command public sympathy if he be forced to resign his post through persistent intrigues against him. Mr. Asquith evidently expects the naval martinets to settle their own quarrels after he has publicly admonished them. but the feeling between Sir John Fisher and Lord Beresford is running so high that they may be unable to do it.

The country instead of taking pride in the unprecedented exhibition of sea power after the mobilization of the fleets, is preoccupied with petty personalities in the relations of admirals and sea lords who are not on speaking terms and will not shake hands when they meet on shore.

The season is described as waning since the last court function has been held yet the Duchess of Wellington will open another week of pleasurable excitement with a royal ball and the Duchess of Westminster will close it with another one. The Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden were as conspicuous figures at the state ball as they had been at the royal ball and at Lord Iveagh's.

The Prince of Wales will sail on Wednesday for Quebec on the Indomitable and Lord Dudley will accompany him. It will be a short cruise and visit, for the Prince will join the King at Cowes during August. The Duke of Norfolk, Lord Roberts, Lord Lovat, General Pole-Carew and many other distinguished Englishmen have already sailed for Canada.

Ambassador and Mrs. Bryce are in London visiting his brother.

SHOULD WIDOWS BE LABELLED.

(By a Nervous Bachelor).

Should husbands wear wedding rings? is a question that is frequently debated in the correspondence columns of the Press, and undoubtedly the topic is an interesting and debatable one, though there would seem to be many good reasons why a married man should proclaim his estate to the world and no particular reason why he shouldn't.

But, so far as I know, none has yet publicly advocated what appears to me to be an even more necessary social innovation, namely, that widows should bear some distinguishing mark of their forlorn condition.

Of course, in the early days of her widowhood, the poor woman, of whom I have no wish to make fun, does announce her sad lot to all and sundry. And for long after the weeds have been put aside, she will wear colors which, to the seeing feminine eye, speak as plain as words of her widowhood. But what does the average man, enraptured of "divinity," met at dance, dinner, "At Home," or hotel, reck of the fact that the said "divinity" is a dream in mauve, or grey, or black and white? Nothing, sir, absolutely nothing.

TOO LATE HE LEARNS.

He perceives her wedding ring, and concludes that she is a married woman with whom it will be quite safe to indulge in a little mild flirtation. Too late he learns that she is a widow, and a widow bent on marrying again. That, sir, is the class I sing. The fascinating widow who has forgotten or stifled her woes and is looking out for No. 2.

"I need not dwell upon the "fatal charm" of the widow. "Beware of the widders," said Mr. Tony Weller, epitomizing the accumulated wisdom of mankind in regard to love-affairs.

Suffice it to say that, if a widow of average attractions means to marry a man, his only chance is to drown himself, or to start immediately for the North Pole. The former, however, is the only certain method of evasion.

NO CHANCE OF ESCAPE.

But the whole point is that, as a rule, the victim has no chance of escape. He is ensnared, fatally ensnared, before he knows where he is. A couple of dances, a tete-a-tete in a "cosy corner," a short railway journey alone, and, if the widow knows her business—and which of them doesn't?—within a few weeks the once gay and careless bachelor is gasping at the altar.

And all because he had no warning in the first instance that she was a widow. If he had known, and if he were a sensible man, he would have fled from the dance, he would have made hay of the cosy corner, he would have hurled himself out of the train window.

I do not plead only the cause of the marriageable man be he bachelor or widowerer; every unmarried woman should support my crusade. What chance has the maid against the widow? None, sir, absolutely none. The former must give the man warning that she is "unattached" the latter need not, and frequently does not until the victim is inextricably in the coils.

I submit then, that in fairness to men, in fairness to unmarried women, widows should be distinctly labelled as such.

The next question is, what form should the label take? I do not think there should be much difficulty about this.

SLITTING THEIR NOSES.

Savage races usually oblige their widows to proclaim themselves by slitting their noses, or pulling out all their teeth, or painting themselves green or Prussian blue, or in some way disfiguring their persons. I do not, of course advocate such extreme measures as these, but, still, widows might be obliged to wear a small black patch over the left eyebrow, or on some other conspicous spot.

Or, again, they might be required to wear a hat of distinctive shape. The former course, however, is open to the objection that patches are removable, the latter to the still more forcible restraint that, if the hat or headdress were unbecoming, no widow would wear it, while if it were becoming every woman would want to be seen in it.

WITH SPECIAL RING.

But, surely, something could be done with the wedding ring or with a special ring. The former might be worn on another finger, or have a black pearl or black diamond let into it, or better still, every widow should be compelled to wear on the little finger of her right hand a silver band. This would be really distinguishable from other rings and in its color would prettily sympolize the wearer's widowed condition.

Something too, should be done to make widows disclose at first sight the number of their progeny, but I have no space to go into this subsidiary reform.

None the less, something of the kind is urgently required. A short while since a young friend of mine married a widow, and on the return from the honeymoon he was rather surprised to be greeted by the children of whose existence he had not previously heard—and, like the little girl in the poem they "were seven."

BODIES OF MURDERED AMERICANS ARE FOUND

Filipino Guides Slay Two Men Engaged in Country's Research.

MANILA, July 14.—The bodies of H. D. Everett, a government forester and T. R. Wakely, a school teacher, who were murdered several weeks ago by tribesmen while on an expedition into the unexplored mountain regions of the islands of Negros, have been recovered by Lieutenant Ahearn, of the constabulary, after a difficult and dangerous search.

Lieutenant Ahearn tells of finding the bodies in the following telegram which has been received here:

"Am returning with bodies of Everett and Wakely, which we found near their last camp in the Bayauai mountains. At first our guides were apparently afraid to lead us into the mountains of the interior island along the route traveled by the two men.

"At length we succeeded in getting guides who were acquainted with Ayhao, the leader of the murderers and who took us to the last camping place of Everett and Wakely.

"Ayhao, it was explained, planned the murder while acting as one of the guides, who were conducting the two white men into the interior of the island.

"While gambling with the other guides he drugged the entire party with the fumes from a plant. Ayhao and some followers killed Everett and Wakely and five guides. The only excuse given by Ayhao was that he felt like killing some one."

Lieutenant Ahearn and his party found the botanical and other equipment of the two men and also Everett's money. All the village and native strong holds in the mountains were abandoned upon the appearance of the searching party.

Lieuteant Ahearn stated that he endeavored to capture Ayhao but was deserted by his guides and ran short of rations.

BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE OF GEO. W. ELKINS BURNED

Loss Estimated at $200,000—Mr. and Mrs. Elkins Away Cruising In Their Yacht.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 14—During an electrical storm which passed over Ogontz, a suburb, tonight, the beautiful country residence of George W. Elkins, son of the Wm. L. Elkins, the former traction magnate, was struck by lightning and in the fire which ensued, was totally destroyed. The loss is estimated at $200,000. Hundreds of dollars worth of bric-a-brac and paintings were saved from the fire by persons attracted to the scene. The fire which occurred in the midst of the suburban homes of some of the most prominent residents of this city, caused considerable excitement. Mr. and Mrs. Elkins are cruising on board their yacht in New England waters.

BIG STEEL COMBINE.

Foreign Trust Intends to Usurp Entire Trade of Great Britain.

LONDON, July 14.—According to the Iron and Steel Trades Journal, out today, the proposed international combination of foreign steel firms, which intends to usurp the entire trade of the United Kingdom, is now completed. It is composed, according to this announcement, of American, Belgium, Russian and German concerns, including the Carnegie trust, three Russian concerns, and four German firms. The new trust will be represented throughout the United Kingdom, it is said, by highly paid agents, who will be instructed to make a strong bid for the British home trade at prices below those at present ruling in the market and lower than the British manufacturers can afford to make.

The Journal adds that the British steel market is at present in a condition unique in its history. For many years large quantities of foreign steel have been dumped into Great Britain at a price lower than it can be produced by the British makers, and as a result is in a state of price unrest, which bids fair to end in chaotic conditions.

British, Scottish and Welsh producers have taken steps to form an amalgamation to fight the foreign trust.

GETTING READY.

Some anglers will soon be out again,
And by the brooklet's shore
Will idly lie and fish and then
Go home and lie some more.

Mother—"Oh, Bobby, you naughty boy, you've been smoking! (Pause.) Poor darling, do you feel very bad?"

Bobby (who has been well brought up)—"Thank you. I'm dying."

SIGNS HE WILL WED; SLAPS GIRL; ARRESTED

Man Who Wanted $2,000 Guarantee to Prevent Being Jilted, Flees.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 14—Charles Chamnitzvik, 23, loved Mollie Bonnet, his Canadian sweetheart, so much that a year ago he persuaded her to appear before a rabbi, and both signed an indemnity contract by which the annulment of the engagement to marry by either party entailed the payment of damages of $2,000 to the other.

He was elated and told all his friends about the shrewd arrangement he had made, and just to make it a little more sure had the contract examined by competent legal authorities who assured him that it read all right.

Chamnitzvik believed the end of his love could never come. But it did. On June 24 he so far forgot himself as to slap Mollie, and it is alleged took her watch and a diamond ring and departed for pastures green. Miss Bonnet, hurt and broken-hearted, kept the news to herself for awhile, but finally notified the Canadian police authorities.

Chamnitzvik was arrested here, and he is on his way to Canada to face the assault and theft charges and explain the engagement contract.

"I can't say that I like that Miss Chickley."

"You don't! Why her father is worth $10,000,000."

"Yes, I know."

"And money talks."

"Yes, but it doesn't giggle."
