On Wednesdry attention the efficers of the R. A. were forturate in having such perfect weather for the r sports; and the new cricket ground presented quite a festive appearance. The slope of the hill within the grounds was dotted with tests, the principal ones being saily decorated withdags. Refreshments were extreed inside the tents on quite an elaborate scale; besides the large tables d zens of smill ones were arranged at the opening of the tents, where one could sit and gossip cumfortably; drink tea, and watch the sports, at the same time. The sports the melieves were good and interesting to watch; the obstacle races being especially amusing. The King's band, of course, supplied the music and played a number of pretty selections.

Mrs. Crawford gave a very pleasant dance on thursday evening at her residence on Morris street. Miss Salter, who resides on Inglis street, gave a very small one for young people also, on the same evening.

The engagement is announced of Miss Jennie

SHP. 25.—"Staart House," the handsome residence of Mr. Geo. W. Stuart, Young street, was brilliantly illuminated yeaterday evening in honor of the marriage of his daughter Annie and Mr. Arthur Ellsworth Cox of Boston, son of Mr. George Cox, Bible Hill. The drawing rocm and adjoining hall presented a charming appearance, brilliant with electric light, gav with floral decorations and thronged with a buy of handscmely attired guests when aboutseven-thirty o'clock the bride made her appearance, leaning on the arm of her father and attended by her sister, Miss Emma Stuart. They were joined bereath a beautiful flower arch at the head of the rocm, composed of carnations, sweet peas and ferns, by the groom such his best map, Mr. M. A.
