THE RIEL BUSINESS.

Another Letter from "Jake" from Nappadoggin.

To the Editor of the GLEANER,

Dear Sir,—Had that book which I had reference to in my last letter to you been on the table, and those who are to blame in the matter had any knowledge of its contents, Riel and those others would have been alive to-day, because the Lord's Prayer would have been sufficient. It says "Thy will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven," and our Saviour said, "The Lord willeth not the death of a sinner but that he be convicted and live." That Boss is the Lord's will, but it was not the will of the McDonald Government, but if that is the height their sense of justice rises to I hope the Lord will forgive them," as they did not know what they did. I hope the plea of invincible ignorance will hold good for them. For the future welfare of Canada I hope that book I have reference to (which is the Bible) will be the standard to go by to settle such important questions; as it must be pleasing to Jew or Gentile. It contains all that is necessary, either temporarily or spiritually. Had the people of Ireland over seven hundred years ago consulted the Divine standard they would never have allowed Henry II of England to come over and trample upon their rights, as they would find in Revelations "Hold fast to that which you have received." "Let no one take your crown." But it is not to be wondered at that the connection between England and Ireland would bear bad fruits, as it too was a direct violation of God's Commandments on the part of Henry II; as the Commandment says, "Thou shalt not steal." "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods," "Thou shalt not kill." And if Henry II and his followers did not break those three commandments then history is false. However, for the present, that is all I shall say in reference to Ireland. We Canadians should take warning, as a national sin is more displeasing to God than an individual one. Therefore it behooves us to watch closely that we frame no law that will not compare favorably with the Divine Law; and we cannot do it without the book. And it would also save Pope Leo a great deal of writing and trouble, see the long letter he has sent a few days ago. I have not studied it yet; the fact is I think it is too long at one end. I have another one here shorter in the middle. Boss! I will let you hear a little of it. Pope Leo seems to claim great glory for the Heroism of the Roman pontiffs of the past. He says "they collected all the forces of Europe into one common band, and in two great battles they destroyed the enemy of Italy and Christendom. One of the plains of Lombordy, the other on the waters of the Lepanto were both undertaken, and fought with the aid and under the auspices of the Apostolic See. The expedition to Palestine, initiated by the Pontiff, brought glory and naval power to the Italians." These words are taken from a letter writ ten by Pope Leo, the 17th day of August, 1883, and which appears in the True Witness of September the 19th of that year. Jake has been studying almost ever since to try and find out who sent the Roman Pontiff to raise an army of fighting men or rather human butchers to go and kill their fellow man either in Palestine or anywhere else. It was not the Prince of Peace that sent them, as his mission upon earth was one of Peace and good will to man. That is what he preached and practised whilst upon earth, and anything the reverse of that must be ante christian. Oh Jake, my toe! Can't help it boss! I didn't make it—it grew. If you ever expect to get cured you must "grin and bear it," Jake. Do you think you could ever make peace between the Catholics and Orangemen in Canada? Yes, Mike, I think I could, because I don't see any cause for trouble in Canada between Orangemen and Catholics, each party has equal rights; one cannot infringe upon the other. A Catholic is just as loyal to the Government under which he lives, as an Orangeman is. He knows he is loyal, and he never wastes any time in telling people how loyal he is; but when the "tug of war" comes, I guess you'll find the Catholics to the front, at least, they have been so in the past, whatever government they lived under; and I don't think an orangeman is a bit more loyal than that; although some of them say a great deal about their loyalty. However, it don't follow that a man who comes to buy goods on credit, and commences to tell how honest he is, is a bit more likely to be the true blue than if he said nothing about it. However, orangeism might have had some meaning in the past. If King James used the Protestants hard by turning them out of office and persecuting them (and according to history he did some of that) all I can say is, that had I lived in that time and been there I would have taken sides with the oppressed and I think every right-minded man in Canada would have done the same. For my own part I have nothing against an orangeman more than I have against my brother; but look here brother orangeman, if King William was an instrument in the hands of the Lord to free you from oppression why not give the glory to God where it belongs. It don't belong to King William. There is where you make the mistake. There's where the man worship comes in, and you also know that your parading with flags and bands playing certain tunes aggravate some catholics, and if God is your Father, the catholics are your brothers; and you know it is wrong to aggravate your brother. Please consider those few remarks over, and receive them as from a brother, from one whose very being and happiness is entwined with your own; and if you persist in fighting and squabbling your way through life you are only working for the devil, and he is a mean boss. Now, I mean both parties are to blame, and if you would meet each other half way, and bury the hatchet forever, you can run the government of this country and make it a pattern for older nations; and you can do that without any assistance from Rome. However, there is now, and ever has been ta e in the wheat, and before we get done we will more clearly point out who has been sowing it. I am, Sir,

Yours,

JAKE.

Nappadoggin, Feb. 4th, 1886.

"Even This Shall Pass Away."

Once in Paris reigned a king
Who upon his signet ring
Graved a maxim true and wise,
Which, if held before his eyes,
Gave him counsel at a glance,
Fit for every change and chance.
Solemn words, and these are they;
"Even this shall pass away."

Trains of camels through the sand
Brought him gems from Samarcand;
Fleets of galleys through the seas
Brought him pearls to match with these.
But he counted not his gain
Treasures of the mine or main:
"What is wealth?" the king would say:
"Even this shall pass away."

In the revels of his court,
At the zenith of the sport,
When the palms of all his guests
Burned with clapping at his jests,
He, amid the figs and wine,
Cried: "Oh, loving friends of mine!
Pleasure comes, but not to stay!
Even this shall pass away."

Fighting on the furious field,
Once a javelin pierced his shield.
Soldiers, with a loud lament,
Bore him bleeding to his tent.
Groaning from his tortured side,
"Pain is hard to bear," he cried,
"But with patience, day to day,
Even this shall pass away."

Towering in the public square,
Twenty cubics in the air,
Rose his statue carved in stone,
Then the king, disguised unknown,
Stood before his sculptured name,
Musing meekly: "What is fame!
Name is but a slow decay—
Even this shall pass away."

Struck with palsy, sore and old,
Waiting at the Gates of Gold,
Said he, with his dying breath;
"Life is done, but what is death?"
Then in answer to the king,
Fell the sunbeam on his ring,
Showing by a heavenly ray,
"Even this shall pass away."

A HORRIBLE STORY.

How a Man Drowned His Family in the Bay of Biscay.

LONDON, Feb. 1. — A man named Francois Paul has been condemned at the Assize court, Finisterre, on the continent to perpetual imprisonment for having incited his young wife to commit suicide, and with her help to drown their three young children. His defence was that he was unable to support them or to witness their death by hunger. The circumstances under which they died were as follows:—Last November, finding themselves in absolute penury, Paul, and at his instigation his wife, took their children to the seashore, and holding two by the hands advanced to meet the incoming tide. The youngest child was in the wife's arms. The first shock of the waves made her swoon, and she and the babe in her arms and a child that held on to her were at once drowned. Francis Paul then seized the surviving boy, who clung to him by the shoulders, and threw him out as far as he could fling him. He then knelt down on the shingle to be immersed himself, but, getting frightened, rose and rushed back from the advancing tide. Some fishermen round him beneath a cliff in a prostrate condition, and he said he was waiting for the four bodies to be washed up to him. He said he had at first meant to perish with them, but finally resolved to survive them, in order to bury them in consecrated ground.

AN OCEAN MASSACRE.

The Crew of a British Ship Murdered by Savages.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Full particulars have just been received of a shocking affair on board the British ship Elbank Castle, in which all of the crew, with two exceptions, were slain. The Elbank Castle, Captain Rouch, was trading in the South Seas, and the massacre took place at the Solomon group of islands. Whilst the Elbank Castle was off that place 20 or 30 natives came on board ostensibly for the purpose of purchasing goods from the crew. The natives were allowed to board the vessel, notwithstanding that they were armed with spears and hatchets. Suddenly they made a furious onslaught on the crew. Captain Rouch, the mate, the cook, a seaman, and a native boy were either speared or tomahawked to death. Two others of the crew, named Brown and Gildie, managed to come out of the attack with their lives; but they could do little or nothing in the face of such odds and were driven below. They remained there all night, and on coming out the following morning a shocking sight presented itself. The corpses of the five men lay on the vessel's deck. The vessel drifted about for a week, and had in the meantime been knocked about. She began to leak. The two men could not rid her of the water, and eventually had to abandon her in a sinking state. They took to their small boat, but encountered rough weather. A wave struck her, and knocked Gildie into the sea and he was drowned. Brown was eventually picked up by a Dutch brig and taken to Australia.

A PAIR OF FOOLS

Whose Folly Leads to a Highly Sensational Criminal Case.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—An inquest was held yesterday in the case of the death of Amer Bartlett, a merchant of Pimlico, who it is alleged was killed by chloroform administered by his wife who wished to marry Rev. Mr. Dyson, a Wesleyan minister. A statement by Mrs. Bartlett was read at the inquest by her physician. She was sixteen years of age when she was married to Bartlett. They made a compact to live together merely as loving friends. This agreement was adhered to for six years, when the husband began to encourage her affection for the Rev. Mr. Dyson. Recently Bartlett began to manifest renewed affection for his wife, but she, feeling it to be her duty to the minister to resist her husband's advances, appealed to him to desist, as he had affianced her to Mr. Dyson. The appeal had only a temporary effect, so she resolved to protect herself from her husband by waving chloroform in front of his face. On the night before his death, as her husband was retiring, she produced a bottle of chloroform which her husband took from her. Upon awaking in the night she found her husband lying by her side. The affair has created an intense sensation and is regarded as likely to culminate in one of the most prominent causes celebres in the criminal history of this country.

Skating as an Exercise.

(London Lancet.)

Beyond question, skating is one of the finest sports, especially for females. It is graceful, healthy, stimulating for the muscles, and it develops in a very high degree the important faculty of balancing the body and preserving perfect control over the whole of the muscular system, while bringing certain muscles into action at will. Moreover, there is this about it which is of special value—it trains by exercise the power of intentionally inducing and maintaining a continuous contraction of the muscles of the lower extremity. The joints, hip, knee and ankle are firmly fixed, or rather kept steadily under control, while the limbs are so set by their muscular apparatus that they form, as it were, part of the skate that glides over the smooth surface. To skate well and gracefully is a very high accomplishment, indeed, and perhaps one of the very best exercises in which young women and girls can engage with a view to healthful development.

It Was a Bad Case of Paralysis.

Free Press.

The other day a well-known doctor was eating lunch in a restaurant alongside of a business man, when the latter remarked, "I just saw a case to interest you in the cigar store. There is a man there who has no feeling at all in his right arm."

"Case of paralysis, of course," replied the doctor.

"Oh, no, it isn't. He has been examined by some of the most eminent surgeons, and they declare that it isn't. If it was a case of paralysis he couldn't move his arm, you know."

"How long has it been so?"

"Over twenty years, he tells me. He says he'll pay any doctor $5,000 to restore the natural feeling."

"I'll see him," remarked the doctor, and when dinner was over the two went into the cigar store, and the medical man was introduced.

"Did this thing happen all at once?" asked the doctor.

"Yes, sir. There was no warning whatever.

"Does the arm fall dead?"

"Perfectly dead. You can stick your knife into it without my feeling a sensation."

"That's odd. Let me feel it." The doctor put out his hand, made one grip, and then turned on his heel and left the place, his face as red as paint, and his gait somewhat eccentric. It was a wooden arm. The real one was shot off at Gettysburg.

Colors that don't Harmonize.

"My dear, don't you intend to invite Mr and Mrs Green to your party?" asked Mr Biller. "Certainly not." "Why not, my dear? They are good friends of ours." "What if they are? I'm going to invite Mr and Mrs Brown." "Well, can't you invite the Greens, too?" "Why, John Biller, you appal me with your shocking taste. Brown and Green in my parlors together! Why, next you'll be asking me to wear blue and yellow. I declare you men have no idea of harmony."—Chicago News.
