CANADIAN CAMP

The Canadian-Jap question was brought up, right or wrong. I bless the Lord for the choice of the personality of the debaters. I know them for being balanced fellows. But what would have been said and suggested if second rate fiddlers had been called upon? Now, it is common knowledge that the countries turn ardently jingcistic. Such a wave sweeps over all Europe, in England not the least. In mature nations such an attitude can be-partially at least-justified. In nations like Canada, who have not rejected the principle of immigration, with plenty of room and future, I wonder if it would not be advisable to go slow in such movements. This country is not compelled to receive a Jap as a Canadian. If there is any doubt about this thororough future allegiance, this can be arranged by delaying or refusing the naturalization. My own naturalization was postponed for six months (at least the moving of the papers) because my lawyer was not sure that I would vote right in the impending election. After the elec tion, which by the way turned Halifax, N. S., Nov 1-C. U. P.'s wrong, I was nevertheless heaved to questionnaire drew an almost blank full citizenship. Once a Canadian
