The motive which prompted the writing and pub-ication of this pamphlet is suggested strongly by ertain letters which are reprinted within its pages On April 2, 1914, Mr. Klein wrote Henry C. Folger, Jr., president of the Standard Oil Company of New York, requesting him to finance a wholly im scheme which Klein had concocted wild a new city, to which he wished to be transporte a number of New York City's large manufact ndustries and perhaps 500,000 of its people.

Klein didn't make any arrangement was to be sent first, the factories or the people. He didn't have any plan by which he could as manufacturers that the people would follow if they went ahead, or the people that they would be supplied with remunerative employment provided the arrived in the city before the factories got there, Of course Mr. Folger turned this proposition down Probably it did not take him any more than the time

On April 11, 1914, nine days later. Klein wrote Pr ident Wilson a letter, making a most violent attack upon the Standard Oil company. He charged, among other things, that the profits of the Standard O company are reinvested in American industries.
