Nearly every day since the houseboat—originated, built and occupied boat—originated, built and occupied boat are lung three trophies of the Reporter—was launched into the waters of Charleston lake in May last, the editor has had to answer a thousand and one questions as to its construction, design, and daptability to its proposed purpose, and how it has met his expectations in many different ways. As a reply to all these questions, the present article is penned. The rough pen sketch at the head conveys a fairly good view of the boat when under sail, and was drawn for us by our friend, Mr. C. C. Slack, Athens. and was drawn for us by our friend,

Mr. C. C. Slack, Athens.

The Scribe and family have occupied beautiful inland water, Charleston sailed it and rowed it to nearly every part of the lake, often making trips of and give them all the information object possible as to its construction, &c. our and five miles daily. To obviate this great obstacle to progress and permanency, it has been suggested that an effort be made to interest in the band young men employed on farms adjacent to the village, as it is thought that they would prove continuous members, and, having less social dis tractions to interfere with their practicing, would sooner become proficient players than village boys. Makes You See Spooks.

Night workers of the literary guild of not strong nerves should take warning by the confession of Mrs. W. K. Clifford, the well known novelist, and forsake the "midnight oil." An article in the Windsor Magazine by Miss Dickens tells something of Mrs. Clifford's habits as a writer. Her mind works the best in the evening, but just as soon as the family are in bed and the house quiet Mrs. Olifford begins to hear burglars at work and gets so frightened she can hardly creep up to bed.

"She one time spoke of this to Mr. Huxley. "It is foolish," she said, "but I always hear burglars moving about." "So do I," answered Huxley. "When I am working at night, I not only hear burglars moving about, but I actually see them looking through the crack in the door at me!" Makes You See Spooks.

them looking through the crack in the door at me!"

Wilkie Collins was an habitual night worker until he was frightened out of it by the appearance of another Wilkie Collins, who sat down at the table with him and tried to monopolize the desk. There was a struggle, and the instand was upset. When the real Wilkie Collins came to himself, sure enough, the ink was running over the writing table, proof enough of a struggle. After that Mr. Collins gave up night work.

Chinese Indifference to Pain.

"A very curious thing about the Chinese is their indifference to pain," said Dr. E. Z. Simmons, the veteran missionary of Canton. "We do a great deal of surgical work in the great City hospital conducted by the united missions at Canton, and it was at first supposed that there would be great trouble in persuading the natives to take anaestletios, but the doctors found to their surprise that anaesthetics were rarely needed and that their patients endured the most serious operations without flinching the fraction of an inch.

"The average Chinaman will assume the required position and hold it like a statue. When the knife touches his fiesh, he begins a slight, monotonous moan and keeps it up until the ordeal is over, but he gives no other indication of pain. Whether this is due to nerve bluntness or stoicism or a combination of both, I have never been able to determine, but the fact remains that the Canton hospital uses less chloroform or ether than any other large institution of the kind on earth."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Flies of Egypt. Chinese Indifference to Pain.

The flies of Egypt deserve a tribute The files of Egypt deserve a tribute to their peculiar qualities. A plague of American files would be a luxury compared to the visit of one fly from Egypt. For untold centuries they have been in the habit of crawling over thick skinned faces and bodies and not being dislodged. They can stay all day if they like. Consequently, if they see an American eye, they light on it and, not content with that, try to crawl in. You attempt to brush them off, but they only move around to the other side, until you are mad with nervousness from their sticky feet. If they find out your ear, they crawl in and walk around. You cannot discourage them. They craze you with their infuriating persistence. If I had been the Egyptians, the Israelites
