"When I was a Boy,"
Writes Postmaster J. C. Woodson,
Forest Hill, W. Va., "I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character, that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary medicines, and advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and one bottle cured me. For the last fifteen years, I have used this preparation with good effect whenever I take

A Bad Cold,
and I know of numbers of people who keep it in the house all the time, not considering it safe to be without it."
"I have been using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for 30 years, with the most satisfactory results, and can cheerfully recommend it as being especially adapted to all pulmonary complaints. I have, for many years, made pulmonary and other medicines a special study, and I have come to the conclusion that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral occupies a position pre-eminently over every other medicine of the class."—Chas. Deveraux, Dover, N. J.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Prompt to act, sure to cure.

POETRY.

The Baby Over the Way.

Across in my neighbor's window,
With its folds of satin and lace,
I see, with its crown of ribbons,
A baby's innocent face.
The throng in the street look upward,
And every one grave and gay,
Has a nod and a smile for the baby
In the mansion over the way.
Just here in my cottage window,
His chin in his dimpled hands,
And a patch on his faded apron,
The child that I love for a friend,
He has kept my heart from breaking
For many a weary day;
And his face is as pure and handsome
As the baby's over the way.
Sometimes when we sit together,
My grave little man of three
Says to me with the question:
"Does God up in Heaven, like me?"
And I say: "Yes, yes, my darling;
Though I almost never say 'Nay,'
As I see the nursery candles
In the mansion over the way.
And oft when I draw the stockings
From his little feet,
And loosen the clumsy garments
From his limbs, so round and sweet,
I grow too lither for singing,
My heart too heavy to pray,
As I think of the dainty raiment
Of the baby over the way."

LEGAL DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or another's or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay up all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncollected for a prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

SELECT STORY.

Their New Home.

"Second, I say we give it up; I'm played out."
The man spoken to gave no reply, but sat motionless for some minutes; then he essayed to make the edge of a ragged trouser-leg cover the space of gleaming skin between it and a broken shoe. The endeavor was futile, and he returned his contemplation of the hills across the lake. The other man threw a pebble into the water, which sang the monotonous underbreath sound of dead calm along the beach at his feet, and spoke again:
"That damned ranch could not be cleared off with less than ten thousand oxen. Wilkins has the check for it, and we're here."
"Still the other man did not speak, but, as before, shifted his position."
"Second, I say! Are you gone dumb? Can't you say anything?"
"No, because the fountains of speech are dried up within me. Come home."
In a silence not broken even by Garth's bitter tones, they walked along the wagon road, until, with a sudden turn to the left, they breached the hill, scorning the loggers' trail and braining their already worn-out bodies by impetuous struggles with the thick undergrowth. After half an hour's climb, Second stopped to look back at the lake below them and the purple tinged range beyond.
"Garth, that lying devil told some truths. This is as fair a spot as there is on God's earth. Give me some land that can be worked and I, for one, won't chuck it up."
"Now, you're foolish, for you know we have neither capital nor credit."
"No; but I've health and two hands and I mean to make good the living the world owes me."
By this time they had reached the place the man had spoken of as "home." It was a two-roomed "board" cabin, containing little besides the saved lengths of logs used as seats, and a few tin plates and cooking necessities. In the second room were two rough beds, like the man, grew still more silent. But the other knew. These two needed few words, and the honily intercourse of the last four years had riveted the tie which bound them.
The portmanteaus and boxes with which, like Englishmen, they had encumbered themselves, had been laboriously transported to their dwelling. Some were still unopened. The suits of clothing were worn and the boots were old, but they were needed for the winter when they wearers went to Vancouver. To see a physician there was the one aim of Second's life, but to Garth, to whom a doctor's care meant a possible choking of death, the

LETTERS.

At Elysian a girl whose sapphiric eyes have taken on a graver look goes about among her poor with greater regularity than before. The evenings not devoted to her father are given to eight classes, the number of her charities has increased, and her Friendless Girls' have found a truer friend. On her bedroom table is a case containing half a dozen letters, two of them in her own handwriting, strapped together with a worn rubber band, and looking as if they had long been carried in a pocket.
And Elysian has ceased to have its meaning.
"Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." That is why kings and queens almost invariably take their crowns off before they go to bed.
The incessant wasting of a consumptive can only be overcome by a powerful concentrated nourishment like Scott's Emulsion. If this wasting is checked and the system is supplied with strength to combat the disease there is hope of recovery.
