

THIS WOMAN'S RECOVERY

Shows Remarkable Restorative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chealey, Ont.—"Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a total wreck. I had terrible pains in my sides and was not regular. Finally I got so weak I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest half way up the steps. I tried two doctors but they did me no good. I saw your medicine advertised in the newspapers and thought I would give it a trial. I took four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and was restored to health. I am married, am the mother of two children, and do all my housework, milk eight cows, and do a hired man's work and enjoy the best of health. I also found Vegetable Compound a great help for my weak back before my babies were born. I recommend it to all my friends who are in need of medicine, and you may print this letter if you wish."

Mrs. HENRY JANKS, R. E. No. 4, Chealey, Ontario.

The Shadow of the Future.

CHAPTER XIII. FRESH FIELDS.

"Hold up!" cried Hodge, offering a not unfriendly shove to safer latitudes. "Mind where you're a-goin' to! Seems to me"—apostrophizing Sydney, who involuntarily sprang forward—"a chap can't step straight afore noon-time ought to be 'shamed of himself, 'cept he be ha-a-if bloated!"

And he grumbled himself off, with his cackling freight, as the obstructor, his shoulder once more by the post of safety, muttered, "Half! Would it were only half!" And Sydney, halting quite near him, saw with an access of profoundest pity that his eyes, turned full upon her now, were absolutely sightless; the light of day to him only darkness; such a thrill of pain ran through her as she realized this, it seemed downright cruel to pass him by without one sign of sympathy. A rattling of points and shrill approaching scream announced the train he waited for. With snorts, as of exhausted effort on such a hot day, the engine came puffing in. "Late!" cried the guard, briskly; "hurry up there, porter!" In the distance the six tourists were all clamoring for a reduction of fare. Carriage-doors began closing. But the stranger Sydney watched seemed forgotten. With a wistful sigh he moved his head now right, now left, as with old habitual gesture of full vision. It seemed as if he would be left behind. But this was more than the girl could suffer. Obedient to an instinct of courageous courtesy, she went quite up to him and spoke.

"I think I heard you say you wished to go on by this train. May I show you to a carriage?"

He turned toward her voice. "I should be very grateful, but—"

"There was no time to lose. "Which class?" asked Sydney.

The color rose to his forehead. "It must be third."

"Then"—she could not say "follow me," so boldly placing her hand within his arm, "this way, please. I am holding the door open. The compartment is empty. Now"—as he took his seat—"will you allow me to fetch your ticket?"

But this service was not demanded. Up rushed the station-master with the needed passport. Sydney, releasing her hand, drew back, with cheeks unnecessarily tingling, as her companion stooped nearer than he perhaps knew.

"I am very thankful," he said, "for your kindness. It is difficult to get used to being helpless."

At the patient gravity of his manner tears sprang to her eyes.

"Ah, that it must be!" she murmured; "I wish—" "I could have done more," she would have said, but the guard was calling out, "Stand back!" With a shriek, off went the locomotive. His hat raised in farewell, the stranger was borne away, and Sydney devoted her few more minutes' loneliness to a vain hunt through memory's hiding-places for some clue to an identity not altogether unknown, she felt convinced.

But she was still in a labyrinth on the matter when her own train rushed in; and having taken her place in a second-class carriage (prudently economizing for return with Mrs. Dacie; even ten-pound notes have an end!) her one fellow-journeyer occupied her attention for the half hour they were together.

After the few instants' comprehensive inspection travelers naturally make of each other, leaving in this case impression of a person of early middle-age, homely and yet refined, denoted a gentlewoman by simple propriety of dress—none too rich, by the exquisite mending of her well-worn gloves—Sydney would have returned for a first sight of the Malvern Hills, but from the opposite corner came the question soon:

"Will you allow your window to be open as well as mine, if you please?"

"Certainly; it is warmer than an hour or two ago."

"Oh, very hot indeed! Dreadful for traveling!"

"Now, I thought it delightful!" said Sydney, smiling.

"Which shows you bound on pleasure," said the lady, with good-humor not untinged by envy, and the sigh she ended with bespoke some species of soothing such as Sydney, out of her present mood, could well spare.

"I hope you are not bound on anything sad," she said, quite earnestly, desiring no more encounters with sorrow that morning.

"Well, sad—no," was the answer, rather with the air of talking being a relief, "I've only come away from something disappointing. I have been a good many miles and spent a good many shillings for nothing, which is provoking."

"Indeed it must be."

"Do you know Northampton?"

"Not at all. I am from the east of England."

"It was Northampton I went to, yesterday—by appointment—to meet a lady—a widow, just the person who would have suited so well as—well, companion, or—to share our home. I thought I had got exactly what I wanted; then when we had our interview the exasperating woman could only simper like a schoolgirl, and tell me she was going to get married again!"

At this Sydney broke into smiles. "It was too bad, though!" she confessed. "A telegram ought to have spared you your journey."

"Just what I told her! And what makes seeing her all the more annoying is that I'm sure she would have suited me better, had she read, and, most of all, wanted a home more than salary. Oh dear, I wish this man had been at Hong Kong before she'd met him."

"Let us hope you will find some one else just as fitting. There must be plenty such," said Sydney.

"Ah, but not to be found when you want them. And I really must have some one. There are circumstances—" but I won't trouble you with those unless you know any one who would fill the situation. I'm sure I would try and make her happy!"

Evidently a kind woman, thought Sydney. Not intellectual, but housewifely "comfortable." If ever dear, distant Mary Dacie needed a home—long might that day be coming!—here might have been one for her. But to mention this fancy would be absurd. So she could only answer that she had no such treasure on the roll-call of her acquaintances, but would remember the want, "a good reader—a good voice—and very little salary."

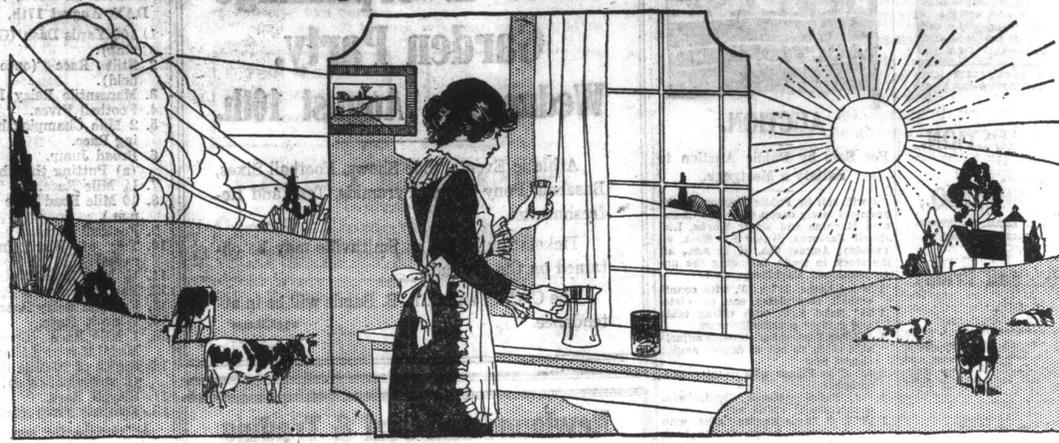

"But a good home," put in the lady, charmed by Sydney's interest.

"Really my dear, if she doesn't mind some—peculiarities, I know I would try and make her like it!"

"I think you would," agreed Sydney; "but if I ever found this valuable person, whom should I direct her to?"

"Oh dear, I have no card about me, but my address is here," drawing an envelope from her sachel. "You stop at Lutterthorpe?" as the train slack-

Milk Which Stays Sweet Through Summer's Heat

IT is difficult to keep milk from "turning" in the summer even with an ice box or refrigerator in the house.

And sweet, pure, fresh milk is essential—especially when there is a baby's food to consider.

Carnation Milk is therefore particularly welcome in summer.

You can keep it on your pantry shelves—any quantity, for every need. Even when the can is opened it stays sweet and fresh for several days.

The reason is simple.

Pure, rich milk from Canada's finest dairy farms is delivered fresh each day to the Carnation condenseries.

Part of the water is taken away by evaporation. While still fresh, it goes into containers.

It is SEALED air-tight—safeguarded against contamination.

And then STERILIZED.

It is not artificially sweetened. It is not separated or skimmed milk—

Simply rich, "whole" milk—wonderfully fresh—reduced to an unvarying standard of creamy consistency.

Use it as it comes to you—to add flavor and deliciousness to coffee, tea, cereals or fruit.

Add water to Carnation Milk—at least an equal part—for use on the table, for the children's drink, for cooking, for every purpose for which you use ordinary milk.

Take Carnation Milk along when you go camping or picnicking.

Begin to-day to end anxiety and disappointment about the milk supply that summer weather brings.

Phone your grocer. Ask him to send several cans of Carnation Milk, tall (16 oz.) size, or a case of 48 cans.

After Influenza

5, Hill Side Villas, Caldicot, Nr. Newport, Mon. March 7th, 1919.

Dear Sirs, I am forwarding photos of my little boy, aged 3 years. At 3 months I commenced giving him "ViroL." This is the result. I found it a really wonderful food. He is just recovering from influenza, and again it proves his best food. I strongly advise all mothers to try it.

Yours truly, J. DAVIS.

ViroL is used in large quantities in more than 2,000 Hospitals and Infants Clinics. It is invaluable for the expectant and nursing mother herself, while for children it supplies these vital principles that are destroyed in the sterilization of milk. It is also a home and chemically prepared of immense value. ViroL Babies have firm flesh, strong bones and good color.

ened speed. "I must say good-day, then. I wish you had been going into Herefordshire with me."

She closed with a regretful handshake. Then Sydney alighted at the Lutterthorpe station, and as the train sped away into distance, read concerning her friend of a few minutes that she was "Miss Hurst, Wynstone, Capel Moor, Hereford."

Make Bovril the first course

Your cold lunch or supper will do you far more good if you begin with a cup of hot Bovril. You need the extra nourishment of Bovril as much as ever in these summer months, when outdoor exercise claims so much of your energy.

So long as there is Bovril in the house you can always have the best of all consumé ready in quick time without getting hot over the cooker.

that run for miles gleaming in and out near by the railway—Lutterthorpe lay basking in the glow of almost noon, when Sydney Alwyn once more threaded her way through lanes her foot-steps had not known for night three-quarters of her young life's years.

It had not altered much in all that time, or its changes lay lower than the surface; Guyswick she could barely remember, but this, an enchanted village full of select delights to childhood, she had not forgotten.

As she went with quick throbbing ear-busy, active little Lytzer, or Lutter, joyment up once familiar paths, the very cottages with their specialities, a row of silky-seeding poplars here, the hollow willow there, anon a bank covered with blue-eyed periwinkles, as of yore, seemed to beam amiable recognition on her. Further up she could have laughed aloud at sight of the Rampant Lion wearing the selfsame expression that once upon a time had alarmed her into suspicion that he might turn alive and come down from his sign, with such artistic craft was depicted the girl bestowed by the noble animal on the unwary folk who entered his enticing portals!

Past the school, where the children came trooping and shouting out as she went by, just as they did at twelve o'clock when she was small, and their riotous exit gave nurse and her the time of day—and there was the church, and round about the many tombs where she had learned from "Taffy" that "widow" must not be encumbered with two d's, and, by the testimony of numerous "His Jacets," that never an a must intrude in "Here Heh."

Almost the kind, quivering old voice sounded in her ears again. Almost she could feel the clasp of the old brown hand about her wrist.

She turned away longingly to the humble homestead across the grassy lane—the very same, with humming bees about it, and apple trees grown shadier and bigger—with half an expectation of seeing her old nurse, white-coiffed and mob-capped, stiff in her sunny corner, clicking away with glittering pins at some mysterious manufacture in Welsh wood, destined for the encasement of Mr. Lewis' legs.

But there the disillusionment began. Nurse's bench was tenanted now by a rabbit-butch whereof the dappled inhabitants worked their long ears and pliant little noses about most interrogatively as she traversed the box-boarded path; but no other welcome was accorded Sydney from her once holiday haunt.

A woman of unfamiliar form opened the door to her knock, and looking with wonder on the young stranger, answered her inquiry with:

"Lewis! Why, no, miss. There've been no Lewis live here this long while. We are Davises. There was one, Lewis by name, but he went afore the two people afore us as you heard."

"Went out! And a long time ago Sydney looked very blank.

"Lewis is gone!" she repeated. "But"—half afraid to put the question, for fear of possible reproach—"he is living! And still here, at Lutterthorpe?"

"Oh, he be here or hereabouts, answered the woman, "though he's dwellin' I can't rightly point out. We're naught but fresh comers, and I'm not much of a one to get names. We only took this place a few weeks ago."

"Thank you," said Sydney, gingham to turn away ruefully, for cottage interior was not inviting to look. With not one who cared to see if there would be no sense in stopping about it.

But the woman lingered, half-hungry, so she explained to her.

"I used to come here often when you was younger. And I made a business this morning on purpose to look you up again. I suppose I foolishly calculated on seeing the people in it as when I last left."

"Which, askin' your pardon, like reckonin' of your chickens as they was hatched, miss," returned Mrs. Davis, taking the proverb of calling, apparently, for maternity leave with numerous progeny were scripping about the once city square.

"True enough," Sydney answered, "and you cannot even tell me, which way I must go to find my home. I do so wish to see you."

"I'll try and find you, miss."

"I'll try and find you, miss."

"I'll try and find you, miss."
