A CHEERING PROSPECT.

Tarara, boom-de-aye!
This was the tune whistled last evening by the hustling manager of the Western Fair as he was walking down Richmond street towards the station. His face was beaming with smiles and the occasion of his happiness was explained in the few sentences that passed between him and an ADVERTISER reporter, against whom he stumbled in a condition of semi-consciousness.

stumbled in a condition of semi-consciousness.
"Hello," said the scribe, "wherefore this exuberance and absent-mindedness?"
"Well, if declare; here we are again.
Well, sir, I have just taken a run out of the office to attend to a few outside duties.
Must have exercise, you know. Yesterday and to-day we have mailed upwards of 6,000 folders and dodgers to the Patrons of Industry, who are coming to the Western Fair en masse this year on Tuesday, Sept. 20. The grand officers will be on hand to deliver addresses, and farmers generally, as well as members of the order, are anxious to see and hear them. A big street parade, with bands and banners, is on the tapis, and every previous demonstration in the city promises to be celipsed on this occasion by the Patrons."
"What are your special attractions this year?"
'I cannot enumerate them. See the programme for yourself. I may say, though, that the specialties secured this year are far in advance of any that have heretofore been exhibited at any Canadian exhibition. We intend to please everybody and induce them to come again.
This year a much larger attendance of American visitors is assured than ever before. The Western has been better advertised than on any previous year, and the attractions merit all that has been said of them in the press everywhere. Take my word for it that the fair this year will be bigger, better and brighter than ever before. Good-bye."

And off Mr. Brown dodged into a wholesale house opposite the Grigg House to confer with a director about some feature in the fair.
Preparations at the grounds indicate ness. "Hello," said the scribe, "wherefore

Preparations at the grounds indicate that a very large attendance is expected. The grove with its overhanging branches is more pleasant than ever, and altogether the pretitest fair ground on the continent will be seen by those who attend the Western Fair next month.
