HIS REPENTANCE.

CHAPTER XX.

NEAL'S VISIT.

Causing the sweeping crape to be taken from his hat, for he prepared to depart on foot, Oswald Cray proceeded through the town to the house of his brother. Just as he reached the door, Mark rode up on horseback, and leaped off with a hasty spring, throwing his bride to the man that waited.

"Of course I am late," he exclaimed.

"Of course you are, by pretty nearly two hours. How did it happen, Mark?"

"Well—I can hardly tell how it happened," was the answer of Mark. "I had a faint to see in the country."

"But why did you go into the country?"

"I—I don't know," exclaimed Mark. "Non-sense, Carrie! Why should I wish to avoid the funeral? I have attended plenty of funerals in my life."

Oswald turned quickly and looked at Mark. It was not the accusation of Mrs. Cray that aroused his attention, that went for nothing but something peculiar in Mark's tone as he answered. To Oswald's ears it spoke of evasion. He could not see his face. It was bent, and he was slapping his duty boots with his riding-whip.

"But why did you go into the country?"

"It was 10:30 when you were here, and I warned you that it was getting time to dress. When I saw your horse brought to the door and you galloped off, I could not believe my eyes."

"Well, I mistook the time, that's a fact. I am very sorry for it, but it can't be helped now. Of course I should like to have attended and paid for my last respects, poor lady. But but I dare say there were enough without me. I was not missed."

"But you were missed," said Oswald, "and waited for, too. It threw us pretty nearly half an hour behind hand. I should not like to keep a funeral waiting, myself, Mark."

"Who was there?" asked Mark.

"The two relatives of Lady Oswald, Sir Philip and his son, Dr. Davenal and myself."

"Dr. Davenal was there, then. But of course he would be. Then he served to do duty for both me and myself. And so Sir Philip came?"

"Should be surprised had he not come."

"Should you, you. He is a cranky sort of a man, an Oswald all over. You are another of them, Oswald. I wonder if you will get cranky in your old age."

"Don't listen to him, Oswald," interposed Mrs. Cray. "He seems 'cranky' himself this morning."

Mark laughed good-humoredly, and tossed to Caroline a late China rose which he had brought home in his buttonhole. "Did you hear the will read, Oswald?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Short and sweet!" cried Mark, alluding to the unimpeachable, which it must be confessed was given in a curt, displeased tone, as if the speaker was himself displeased.

"I think it is you who are cranky, Oswald."

Oswald smiled. "A thought was causing me vexation."

"Vexation at me?"

"No, no."

"Well, and who comes in for the money?"

"The Stephensons?"

"No. The Stephensons came in for a very poor portion. It is left to Dr. Davenal."

"To Dr. Davenal?" echoed Mark in his astonishment. "No!"

"The bulk of the money is bequeathed to him. All of it, in fact, with the exception of a few minor legacies. The Stephensons have £30 each and the furniture."

Caroline had dropped her embroidery again, and was gazing at Oswald, apparently unable to take in the news. Are you telling this for a joke?" she asked.

"The money is left to Dr. Davenal, Mrs. Cray, repeated Oswald, and certainly then, I was no sound of joking in his tone. "It surprised me all."

"What a lucky man!" exclaimed Mark. "I wonder if he had any provision of the doctor's stable, the one he had so long wanted to buy. The owner's dead, and it is that I supposed he observed to the doctor for sale at last. I observed to the doctor that he would not buy it at all; he had had a heavy loss, and could not afford it."

"It is not true, Mark!" interrupted his wife.

"It is true, Caroline. But don't you go and repeat it again. He said, moreover, he had great need himself of a thousand or two, and did not know where to turn for it. Mind you, I believe he was betrayed, as it were, out of the avowal, I had been saying so much about the field; for he brought himself suddenly up, as though recollection had come to him, and said, 'Don't talk of this, Mark!'"

And Mark's long tongue had talked of it! Oswald Cray listened to its every word.

"If he could not have foreseen then that this money had dropped to him! And yet I should think he must have known it from Lady Oswald; or partially known it. How much is it, Oswald?"

"Six or seven thousand pounds. It would have been a great deal more but for certain losses. Wedderburn said she was nervous, and to embark money in some speculation, and it failed."

"How stupid of her!" exclaimed free Mark. "I wonder now whether the doctor did know of this? If he did he'd keep his own counsel. Did he appear surprised, Oswald?"

"He was not there. He left before the will was read, saying he had attended a consultation."

"Well, so he had," said Mark. "I happen to know that much. It was for 12:30."

So far, then, Dr. Davenal had spoken the truth. A doubt had been crossing Oswald's mind, amidst many other curious doubts, whether Dr. Davenal had made the excuse to get away, and so avoid hearing the will read and himself named chief legatee.

He remained some time with Mark and his wife. They asked him to stay for dinner, but he declined. He had ordered a chop to be ready at the "Apple Tree," and was going back to London early in the evening—by that 7 o'clock train you have before heard of.

"Had you any particular motive for absenting yourself from Lady Oswald's funeral?" he asked Oswald.

Accompanied him to the street door on his departure.

"Not I," answered Mark, with the most apparent sincerity. "It was very bungling of me to mistake the time. Not that I like attending funerals as a matter of taste."

He stood at the Abbey door, watching his brother wind around the branching rails, for Oswald was taking the station on his way to the inn. Very cleverly in Mark's own opinion, he had parried the question of his purpose absence. His absence was purposeful. With that chloroform on his conscience, he dare not attend the funeral of Lady Oswald.

And the afternoon went on.

It was growing dusk, and Oswald Cray was beginning to think it time for his departure. He had not stirred from the chair where he ate his dinner, though the meal was over long ago; had not called for lights; had not waved John Hamos away when he appeared with them. His whole range of thought was absorbed by one topic—the doubts of Dr. Davenal.

Yes, it was of no use to deny it, it had come to that with Oswald Cray. Doubts he scarcely knew of what or to what extent; scarcely knew where these doubts or his own thoughts were carrying him. On the previous night he had for a few moments given the reins to imagination; he had allowed himself to suppose for argument's sake only, that Dr. Davenal had given that chloroform knowing or fancying it might prove fatal.

But had the revelation of this day supplied the link that was wanting? Had they not supplied it? The death of Lady Oswald brought a fortune to Dr. Davenal.

Canadian Eggs, Etc.

Why are the eggs laid by Canadian hens so much superior to the American ones? Because they are surrounded by better influences, a more bracing atmosphere, and are fed on more nourishing food. Why is Gold Baking Powder better than all others? Because only materials of absolute purity are used. It is pure cream of tartar and pure soda in exactly the right proportions.

The Florida orange crop this season will probably be the largest ever known.

Don't call Iowa "Ho-o-wah." The natives don't like it. "Eye-o-way" goes.

A Wonderful Cure.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cold, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore but to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one half the bottle showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had almost disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know of."

Comfort for the fat and the lean can be derived from some recent medical statistics, which show that at the age of 36 lean men generally become fatter and fat men leaner.

A man's wife should always be the same especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," at least so they say, and their husbands say so too.

Suits for $207,000 have been filed against the city of Atlanta, Ga., by people who claim that their health has been injured through miasma from the city dumping grounds.

Carter's Little Liver Pills must not be confounded with common Cathartic or Purgative Pills as they are extremely unlike them in every respect. One trial will prove their superiority.

Certain sophomores at Ithaca, N. Y., recently raided the quarters of the freshmen and forced milk down their protesting throats.

Nothing impure or injurious contaminates the popular antidote to pain, throat and lung remedy and general corrector, Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. It may be used without the slightest apprehension of any other than salutary consequences. Coughs, rheumatism, carache, bruises, cuts and sores succumb to its action.

CHURCH UNION.

Copy of an Important Resolution.

To Be Laid Before the Congregational Union at Its Annual Meeting Here in June.

Following is a copy of a resolution which will be offered at the annual meeting of the Congregational Union at London on June 7:

The delegates of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in their addresses of fraternal greetings to the Congregational Union of Ontario and Quebec at Montreal last June, having in substance said that they believed the time had come when the two bodies should not only think of, but approach each other in plain, frank talk about the subject of closer union; that having made several endeavors with the Anglican and other churches they felt persuaded that the next union of churches would, in the providence of God, be one between Congregationalists and Presbyterians; that they thought these bodies ought to unite for the reasons that they are greatly similar in doctrine, worship, education of their ministry, general church practices, and that they might the more successfully meet the skepticism, atheism and Romanism in the land, and deal with error and wrongdoing in the churches, and having testified their esteem for Congregationalists, and their personal pleasure and harmony in Christian work with men of the body with whom they had come in contact, etc., etc.

And the Congregational churches, more or less, having ever claimed full liberty of conscience for the individual, and the complete autonomy of the local church, being not schismatical, but having ever fully acknowledged and wrought for the manifest unity of all true Christians as the body of Christ, and having had this subject in various forms before the churches now for some time, but more especially by the action of the twelve Congregational ministers who overtook the Toronto Presbytery and offered for themselves a conference with that body, or with such of their number as they might appoint, on the subject; that if it must be that they (the two bodies) remain apart, it would be well for themselves and the Christian churches generally to know why; that if there is really no New Testament ground for remaining apart, they (the twelve) gave them equal credit with themselves for the desire expressed as above referred to, and in other ways, that the unity of our faith should be made more manifest. Therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the personal members and the delegates of churches constituting the Congregational Union of Ontario and Quebec assembled, do choose and elect a committee of—personal and—representative members to meet with any similar committee appointed by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Canada.

1. To thoroughly and prayerfully consider and if possible frame a basis of union for future adoption by the two bodies according to the requirements of their different systems of church government, which basis shall recognize and involve the teaching—principles, precepts and example—of our common Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, which he has given for the individual and social guidance of his people, and the teachings and practices of his apostles and the churches of the New Testament founded upon them.

2. To form if possible some practical plan of working, by which the two denominations shall be brought into truer harmony and co-operation in their various church schemes and life, but more especially in their work upon the home and foreign mission fields.

3. That this committee report to the union next year the results of its labors for reception and adoption, or otherwise; that in the event of their disagreement, they may be recommended to the churches for their individual or independent action in relation to the matter.

4. That this committee shall, until such union of Presbyterians and Congregationalists, or of Congregationalists and any other denomination or denominations, has taken place, be a standing committee, to meet with a similar committee appointed by the Presbytery, Methodist or the Anglican Church, the Baptist or Disciple churches of Canada to report to the union and be appointed annually.

All this we do in humble dependence upon, and for the honor of our common Lord and Saviour, who, on the eve of his passion and with Getsemane and Cavalry in full view, prayed that his disciples might all be one, even as he and his Father were one, that the world might believe that the Father had sent him.

SHOT HIM SIX TIMES.

A Handsome Young Widow Fires Half a Dozen Bullets Into the Fellow Who Insulted Her.

DALLAS, Tex., May 29.—Just before 7 o'clock Saturday morning Mrs. Lillian Reeves, a handsome widow of 20, shot Louis Longenetti six times as fast as a double-action pistol could fire the bullets. Five of them struck Longenetti in the breast and stomach and the sixth entered his throat. The woman was arrested. The testimony at the prisoner's hearing showed that Longenetti had roomed at the boarding-house of Mrs. Reeves and her mother, Mrs. James Coney. Four weeks ago he insulted Mrs. Reeves and was ordered from the premises. He secured a room next door and began to circulate stories reflecting on her good name. He accused her of visiting disreputable houses. Yesterday morning the woman stepped to the sidewalk to get a pitcher of milk. Longenetti passed along and insulted her. She drew a pistol from beneath her apron and never ceased firing until all the chambers were empty.

Justice Skellon held the prisoner for the grand jury, placing her bail at $1,000. This she gave and was released from custody. Mrs. Reeves' husband was a conductor and lost his life in an accident on the Texas and Pacific Railroad a year ago. Longenetti was 35 years of age, a bartender, and came from Memphis four months ago. It is not believed that Mrs. Reeves will be prosecuted.
