

HOW J. P. MORGAN SAVED THE DAY

Vivid Pen Picture of Dramatic Incident in Height of Wall Street Panic.

New York, Oct. 27.—The New York Journal gives the following vivid picture of how Morgan saved the day on Wall street:

All through the morning, despite the millions that were being poured into the market, prices continued to drop steadily on the exchange. The price of money arose in proportion. Union Pacific fell from 110 1/2 to par, Great Northern from 7 1/2 to 7, Reading 9, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul 7 1/2, Southern Pacific 6 1/2, American Smelting 5, and so on down the list, while the price of money on call loans from 25 to 50, then to 75, and finally to 100.

Two o'clock arrived amid tremendous excitement. A loan of $100,000 was snapped up at 130. The floor of the exchange was a perfect bedlam. White-faced brokers dashed about in a frenzy of fear. They begged the money sharks for loans at any price.

Stocks continued to tumble. Scores of men faced absolute ruin. The supply of money apparently was exhausted. From his place in the room, President Ransom H. Thomas took in the situation at a glance. Jamming his hat down over his ears, he leaped to the floor, fought his way through the mob of frenzied financiers and dashed out of the door.

A thin, white-faced, careworn man seen running at top speed across Broad street, and through Wall to the office of the National City Bank. Ignoring the attendants at the door, he leaped up the stairway, springs into the waiting-room, which he crossed with a bound, and flings open the door of President James Stillman's private room.

"The bottom is dropping out of the market," he cries. "Money is advancing to 150. We must have $25,000,000 instantly to break the grip of the sharks or the end is at hand!"

A hurried consultation follows between the two leaders.

"It is impossible for us to advance it all," cries Stillman. "We'll go halves at 6 per cent. See Morgan for the balance."

With a bound, Thomas is out of the room once more, down in the street, and flying diagonally across the street, threading his way through the crowds to No. 23, the office of J. Pierpont Morgan.

The conversation with Stillman is hurriedly repeated to Morgan.

While Mr. Thomas waited Mr. Morgan got in communication with representatives of the National City, Hanover, Chase, First National and other banks, and a pool was formed to furnish the needed relief.

The hands of the clock point to 2:12. A minute later Morgan announces the decision.

"Push back to the exchange," is his message; "the money is at your command."

Once more Thomas wings his flight. Through the crowd he leaps, up the steps of the exchange, from the portals of which the shrieks and roars of the maddened brokers are belching. A foot inside the doors, he hurls his message from No. 23.

"Money's coming boys! Morgan will supply it—$25,000,000 at ten per cent. Up, up go the stocks; down, down goes the price of money. U. P. swings back to 110 1/2, Great Northern to 115 1/2, Reading to 7 1/2, Southern Pacific to 6 1/2. Trading is resumed with a vengeance. Prices leap back to their former level, and even begin to mount above it. The situation is saved.

The gong sounds, the gavel falls, and trading for the day is done. Simultaneously a hundred throats shout out a cry more strident, fiercer, and exultant than any heard when the panic raged its fiercest:

"What's the matter with Morgan?" "He's all right!"

Chelsea Green Will Not Be Annexed People Well Satisfied as They Are

A Lively Meeting Held Saturday Night at Which Annexation Was Killed.

Chelsea Green will not come into the city. That was decided almost unanimously at a meeting of the board of control and the citizens on Saturday night.

It was thought that the meeting would be a somewhat stormy one, but those in favor of annexation did not turn up. Mr. W. E. Mitchell, who has been leading the agitation, did not go to the meeting. He claims that he was not officially notified that it was to be held.

There was a large crowd of property-owners and others interested in the matter present, and it did not take them long to dispose of the annexation movement.

This settles the annexation sentiment for some time at least.

No Need of It.

Mr. Walter Gibbling, chairman of the board of control, entered the first protest against annexation. He could see no need of it. He declared there was no use for such a step. The Green had waterworks, electric lights and a bridge. What more did they want?

Of course, there were no policemen in the Green, and as far as the Green itself was concerned, there was no need for one. There was some rowdiness.

But that was further up the Thompson road, and had no connection with Chelsea Green. So far as fire protection was concerned, the people of Chelsea Green would be no further ahead with city protection, as the whole Green could be burned down before the fire brigade could reach it from either the central or East London stations.

Mr. Mitchell Criticized.

Mr. Frank Welch criticised the action of Mr. Mitchell. He declared that he had no right to speak on behalf of the residents of Chelsea Green, as he was not even a resident of the place. He could not act as spokesman for them. The residents had everything that the city could give them now without annexation.

It was pointed out that there was a splendid sewer system there, something that some of the residents of the city could not obtain, as was shown by the experience of the White Company. The Green could put up new lights, something the city could not do for a couple of years. Factories would come to Chelsea Green, because there were many excellent sites, a splendid sewerage system, and good water, advantages which the city itself did not possess.

The board of control decided to install a new light at the corner of F. W. Coates' store, and another at the church corner on Adelaide street.

The matter of buying a snowplow was left over for a subsequent meeting.

Grafton & Company Will Give Away False Faces on Tuesday.

Grafton & Co., clothing manufacturers, will give away false faces to the school children of London, tomorrow afternoon after 4 o'clock.

The false faces embrace every expression, and all of them are ridiculously funny. Every boy should have one, and Grafton & Co. have one for every boy.

The false faces will be presented at the Carling street entrance of the Grafton store.

An invitation is extended to all to be on hand, and secure a false face for the Halloween party.

WHAT CARP ARE GOOD FOR.

Orlando F. Thomas, a New York banker, who owns a stock farm in this vicinity, has settled the mooted question as to what carp are good for. The late Gov. Roswell P. Flower ejected Wayne County farmers into raising this kind of fish. Banker William S. Gavitt stocked Wayne County streams with carp, and ever since has been excommunicated in public and private. Carp gradually took possession of the streams to the exclusion of game fish.

Last spring the high water in Clyde River left tons of carp on the flats. Banker Thomas had his men gather up and plow under all the carp he could get, and sowed sugar beets on the field. That sugar beet field is the finest in all Wayne County this year, and will raise between forty and fifty tons of beets to the acre.

This summer the continued drought dried up all the little streams and swamps,

A MODERN FAUST SOLD SALVATION

A Jew Who Had Made Bargain Refused to Give Up Deed for Less Than $200.

Vienna, Oct. 27.—A remarkable case, in which the effects of medieval superstition and suggestion are curiously mingled, has come under the notice of the doctors of the Rudolf's Hospital, in Vienna.

A Hungarian tradesman named Weiss was recently admitted to the hospital suffering from an illusion which caused him continually to lament the loss of his salvation. It appears that some weeks before Weiss was sitting with friends in a coffee house in Pressburg, when the conversation turned on religion and a future life.

Weiss declared that there was no such thing as a future life or salvation, and added: "I would sell my chance of salvation for $250."

A Jew named Krauss accepted the offer on condition that the transaction was put in writing. A regular deed of sale, conveying Weiss' salvation in the next world to Krauss was thereupon drawn up, executed by Weiss and duly witnessed. Krauss took the deed, and handed over the $250 to Weiss, who boasted that it had been easily earned.

A fortnight later Weiss lost his wife, who was killed in a carriage accident. He regarded this accident as a sign of the divine anger with his impious bargain, and the idea so preyed on his mind that his reason gave way, and he was taken to the hospital.

Professor Obermeyer, who had charge of the case, on hearing this story from the man's relatives, decided to try the effects of counter-suggestion and advised Weiss' relatives to recover the deed of sale.

Krauss, however, declared that since he had bought the other man's salvation, his own business had prospered exceedingly, and he refused to give it up under $200. Weiss was unable to pay this, but finally the chief rabbi of Pressburg, to whom the matter had been reported, induced Krauss to hand the deed back to the Jew, man on receipt of $100.

The effect was most marked. Weiss, reassured as to the fate of his soul, immediately improved. A new deed was drawn up, in which Krauss solemnly conveyed the other man's salvation to him. This was witnessed by two doctors, and Weiss has now been discharged, cured.

The German Emperor has issued orders that all of the numerous imperial automobiles are to be driven slower hereafter than has been the case in the past. This action is said to be due to the large number of accidents caused by speeding automobiles.

Dr. Paul Prager, an army surgeon of Vienna, suggests that molds of the mouths of prisoners would be much better than finger prints for identification purposes, as the palate remains absolutely unchanged throughout life.

According to a German publication, the automobile factories of that country during the past five years produced cars valued as follows: In 1902, $2,615,000; 1903, $3,808,000; 1904, $9,529,000; 1905, $16,669,000; and 1906, $29,800,000.

BEER* IS A FOOD

LAGER is a mild appetizing product of malt and hops, with less alcohol than sweet cider, which cannot ferment in the stomach. It is specially suited to women as a dinner drink.

ALES as brewed in Ontario are so rich in the food elements of malt that they rank above milk as an item of diet, and are far purer than milk in when city-dwellers get it.

PORTER differs from ale in that it is malted (B. coffee) in the brewing process, and this makes porter nourishing. It is a real specific for anemic and run-down people.

STOUT is the richest and most strengthening of malt-beers; it contains nearly as much nourishment as eggs, and digests easier. This people will find it builds healthy flesh.

and particularly a deep carp breeding pond in a swamp on the Thomas stock farm. Banker Thomas had his employees gather up all the bullheads, perch, sunfish, bass and other food fish, and carried them in milk cans on stone boats to Clyde River, where they were dumped in.

Tons of carp of all sizes, ranging from fingerlings to big fish weighing 40 pounds and over, were left in the ponds in the swamp. These were pitchforked up into carts and drawn out on the oats stubble, spread into furrows, and plowed under. This field will be sowed to sugar beets next spring. The pond hole that dried up covered over ten acres of ground and had never dried up before. Sufficient carp were obtained to fertilize a ten-acre sugar beet lot.

"Banker Thomas figures that carp are the cheapest fertilizer he can get, and are better than the commercial fertilizer, or ordinary manure. Lyons correspondence New York Sun.

His honor, Judge Addison, had once to deal with the problem, "When does an egg become stale?" The plaintiff suggested that in summer eggs became stale "about a week after they came to market," but the judge declared that the real test of an egg's staleness was the moment it became fit for use at a contested election.

THE ORIGINAL.

The little village could not boast of very many entertainments, and consequently a concert was anticipated with great delight by the inhabitants. It so happened on one occasion that a singer of renown came down to spend a few days with the squire, and smilingly acquiesced in the request of the squire that he should sing at the village concert.

His song, which was delivered with deep feeling, for which he was famous, was the old favorite, "The Village Blacksmith."

In response to a volleys of encore he was about to give one of his operatic successes, when the chairman tugged hard at his coat tail.

"Better sing 'Towd 'n' over again, mister," he said. "I 'pen to be the chap you've been singing about—the village blacksmith—and I reckon it ud only be fair to me if you was to sing it all over again, and pop in another verse saying as 'ow I let out bicycles."—Punch.
