

HIGH PRAISE FOR WOMEN'S CLUBS

Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst Says Movement Is Factor in the World's Progress.

STATES CASE FOR WOMAN

Hopes That Her Sisters Will Not Imitate Men Along Political Lines When They Secure the Vote.

"If I thought that women in politics would be mere copies of men, I would not be the enthusiastic suffragist that I am," said Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst...

The emigration of girls of the working class from England is not encouraged, as it would be, had women of Canada a voice in safeguarding the moral and social welfare of the nation...

When it is a matter of payment, said Mrs. Pankhurst, woman pays her full share of everything, or if there is punishment to be meted out for broken laws she is not spared. It was, therefore, only just and right that all the privileges of human beings should be accorded to woman.

Women are tired of being classed with children as irresponsible beings, continued Mrs. Pankhurst. When women are made full-grown members of the human family, then the laws of the nation will begin to be improved.

The importance of the woman's movement in Canada is felt by the women of England, England is the storm-centre of the woman's movement where the old civilization, old conventions and ideas are so deeply rooted.

In conclusion, Mrs. Pankhurst urged the women who have all they require for themselves to do something for the great majority of women who have less pleasant conditions, and to make the world better for all who come after as well as for the less fortunate of woman today.

A vote of thanks to Mrs. Pankhurst was moved by Mrs. Gordon Wright, and seconded by Mrs. Henderson. In moving the vote Mrs. Wright said that representing the Dominion W. C. T. U. it afforded her especial pleasure to move the vote of thanks, as her organization had long realized that perhaps through the enfranchisement of woman lay the shortest, sanest, surest and most speedy means to the termination of the liquor traffic.

A vote of thanks was also tendered to Lady Gibbons for presiding.

Legislators feel themselves in honor bound to do what is expected of them by the people who elected them, and hence women in approaching legislators to petition for new laws are distinctly at a disadvantage, because they have had no part in electing these men.

A Great Movement. Mrs. Pankhurst referred to the woman's club movement as one of the greatest movements in recent years. In all parts of the world this woman's movement is evident, and has for its aim the betterment of woman's social and political status.

In countries with representative government, it takes the form of a demand for suffrage. In countries without representative government, this movement is working for better education and social betterment along other lines.

The wonderful chain of clubs in Canada, Mrs. Pankhurst declared, would play a great part in the advancement and uplifting of the nation and community. It was very fortunate that in woman's clubs in Canada party politics were eliminated. In England they existed largely to further the interests of particular parties.

Without electoral responsibility, said Mrs. Pankhurst, it is extremely regrettable that woman's feminine influence should be used in canvassing and working for political parties. In America the clubs are devoting their attention more largely to the study of conditions and political situations.

In study alone there often lies a danger of remaining inactive too long. In the United States particularly the clubs were neglecting to be practical in their devotion to study. This was not the case in England, and it was to be hoped that it would not be so in Canada.

Referring to the argument that Canadian women do not want the vote, Mrs. Pankhurst contended that this did not dispense the need of suffrage.

Some provinces marriage disqualified females from holding any property whatever. In short, women were denied the rights of a human being. In other provinces married women were allowed to hold property. The need of having a uniform law with regard to the property rights of married women should be an argument for woman suffrage, even if Canadian women do not want it.

The right of mothers to the guardianship of their own children, or to equal influence in the decision of their children's future, is also not recognized by law, notwithstanding that the life of the mother is so much more closely linked to the life of the child than is the father's life. It is unjust that the father should have the legal right to decide the religion or education of his children.

In England the imperial question is with the argument that the voters in England have imperial as well as national rights, and the position of women in England is not the same as in Canada or Australia. But this argument does not hold good.

Woman's colleges in England are attracting a great many women of the leisure class, and the graduates of these colleges are looking to Canada for opportunities. But in Canada the homestead law denies the privilege of homesteading to women. This restrictive homestead law is very injurious to Canada, as it deters from immigration women of the better educated class, who are graduating in hundreds from English universities and agricultural colleges without opportunities awaiting them at home.
