THE LONDON ADVERTISER
 LONDON, ONT., FRIDAY, DEC. 1.

A QUIET PROPHECY.

A YEAR AGO Mr. Frederick Palmer, the accredited war correspondent of all American and Canadian large daily newspapers, told Londoners to be of good cheer regarding the west front. Conditions were such as to make for gloomy forebodings in the minds of many at that time, but Mr. Palmer, who in spirit is as much a Britisher as anyone under the flag, was not dismayed. He had seen, and he knew, and he was confident that time alone was needed to build up a machine on the west front that would, when it got to its maximum strength, cause the German organization to "crack." Mr. Palmer undoubtedly cheered up thousands of people on his tour through Canada.

This year he again came with a message of good cheer. He is a war correspondent with a reputation dating back beyond the Boer uprising. He has the confidence of the British commanders, or he would not be trusted to return to the United States and Canada. A great faith reposes in him, for he holds the secrets of the British and French. He will not state that reputation, nor damage that confidence by talking wildly, and when he says that the war will be decided on the western front, and that the Somme drive is to go on and on until the "crack" has come, we, who remember his promise that the British were capable of great things last year, are inclined to believe that Mr. Palmer knows whereof he speaks. He does not go into reasons; he does not discuss Rumania; he is a west front man, and if he does not prophesy loudly, he makes an impression with his quiet conviction that the big ring of the tragic world hippodrome lies in France and Belgium.

"The line has only to be broken once, once, mark you, and it will not have to be broken again," was the most telling sentence of his whole lecture last night. It carried weight with his audience, and it seemed to sweep aside all other considerations of war. Mr. Palmer had been there, where Mr. Palmer had been and observed the smashing power of the British, was to be the end of the struggle of the giants.

Mr. Palmer told us of the preparatory stage. Now he has told us of the first trial of the big machine; he adds that it has made good. When next he returns to the city to deliver another chapter of his experiences, may it be to tell that he witnessed the breaking of that line which he declares is not impracticable.

SHAKESPEARE'S LAN- GUAGE.

SHAKESPEARE is like Christmas, coming to us about once a year and sometimes, like a dividend, he skips and passes altogether. "When Mr. Shakespeare comes to town," however, as the old rhyme chance ran, he gets usually a pretty fair audience, especially when presented by a conscientious and devoted artist like Robert B. Mantell, who grows better all the time.

There are many, though, even among thoughtful and accomplished people, who do not particularly enjoy Shakespeare, particularly the tragedies, and may away. It is a reproach hurled at Britain and the British by the German foe that we do not understand and appreciate our dramatist, and that he belongs properly to the nation that enjoys his work and keeps it on the stage. In Berlin there is always some theatre playing Shakespeare; not so in London or New York.

It cannot be denied that much study is devoted to Shakespeare in our schools and colleges, and that both popularly and in critical circles he is perpetually plastered with eulogy and idolatry. He is an institution of ours, something to boast of, a tallman venerated, but not comprehended, a gold medal of our race put away in a box somewhere and remembered with pride, though not often looked at. Why do we stop reading Shakespeare after leaving school, while we put a handsome edition on the shelf? Our fine English and American scholars have tried with and probably surpassed the best German criticism and elucidation of the plays. Where will you find German interpreters equal to Dowden and A. C. Bradley, McCallum, Furness and Hudson? But the mass of our people do not like the plays well enough to bring good actors offstage around to perform them.

Perhaps one advantage in a "way possessed" by the German Shakespearean stage is the language. An excellent standard verse translation, in a modern dialect, is in use over there, while the pure, original Shakespeare itself, though supreme as poetry over any translation, is frequently a little cloudy with ancientness to the English auditor of the plays. In a way Shakespeare's English is modern enough, but still his vocabulary is immense, and a sprinkling of the common words show over and under a meaning somewhat strange. While a reader may grasp the general sense of a passage, solving at his leisure the difficulties, the ear of the spectator in the theatre falls here and there to catch at once the meaning of a word or phrase, and may consequently be thrown clear off the trail for a time. Just a miss now and then may blur the effect to the extent of inducing perplexity, apathy or "I give it up."

For example, take the "to be or not to be" soliloquy in Hamlet. Even the scholars are at sixes and sevens as to its meaning, in the large or in detail. The first phrase has been interpreted by Dr. Johnson to raise the question of a future life; then Malone started the idea long maintained that it raises the question of suicide, but recent scholars think not so. Shakespeare doubtless told his own actors just what he meant.

The "after death" is an "undiscovered country," which probably means the unrevealed country, the most phrases, then, "From whose bosom no traveler returns," meaning "whence no one comes back to tell of it." The ordinary spectator is apt to feel an inconsistency between Hamlet's observation and his having recently seen his father back from the undiscovered country, but informed as to the meaning of "undiscovered," he will recollect that the ghost precisely said that he could not discover or reveal the secrets of his prison-house. The supposed inconsistency turns into strict continuity when the vocabulary is clearly understood, apart from the possibility that before the play within the play Hamlet has become somewhat skeptical as to the truth of the ghost, and wants to test it, as well as the king's conscience.

In the phrase, "Sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought," the word "thought" is defined by some as melancholy, or it may be "anxiety," as in the biblical, "Take no thought of the morrow." Learies similarly uses the word later in reference to his mad sister. The meaning is certainly not modern. "Fardels" is another rare word in the soliloquy under consideration.

This sort of thing is apt to puzzle the ordinary modern English audience and blur the sense of the play. The Germans understand the language of the performance, but the points are often hidden from our people. It does not speak or understand "the tongue that Shakespeare spoke."

EMPLOYING WOUNDED THE PROPER METHOD.

AN EDITORIAL appearing in these columns under the heading "Mail Beats the Cable," in which it was pointed out that the death and wounding of some London men at the front was reported by private letter long before official notification was received, (in one instance by the wounded man himself after being returned to an English hospital), has been criticized by the name of a soldier, who after being wounded was appointed to the pay and records office, and has been serving there some time. He has been serving in the office because he was detailed there for duty, and in letters to his father he has reported that the department has been kept busy until midnight at times because of the rush of casualties. The father of this man who has done his bit so well, and is now working on records because he was ordered there, believes that a reflection was cast upon those men employed in this office who have served in the firing line. Such was not the intention.

The advertiser realizes that men who have served in France or elsewhere and have later been placed in the pay and records office are the men who should be holding such positions. They are the only soldiers who should be thus employed, and if they were the only men employed in the pay and records office, no matter how great their numbers, they would not think of directing any criticism at the service. It is a fact, however, that many men and officers who have never seen the front are employed at the headquarters. This may be through no fault of their own, but they enlisted for active service, and the system which holds them in England while other wounded men are available is not the proper system.

The father who writes of the matter also points out that the pay and records office frequently does not receive word of casualties until many days and even weeks after the casualties have occurred. He agreed, however, that such cases as The Advertiser reported called for some explanation. The advertiser dealt entirely with the principle of the matter, and regrets that any relative believed that criticism was being made of the staff as individuals. The last thing intended was to cast the slightest reflection upon those who have been employed in the pay and records office after being wounded.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Germany's wireless operators can sink more British cruisers than all the mighty skulkers of Kiel. A certain writer has termed the United States "that vast slap-up centre of God's universe." Was his reference to elections?

German money will soon be worth as much in New York as Mex. The pound sterling continues to stand up on its sturd legs.

Germany is at times very considerate of United States' mail. Her consideration of American lives on the high seas is less marked.

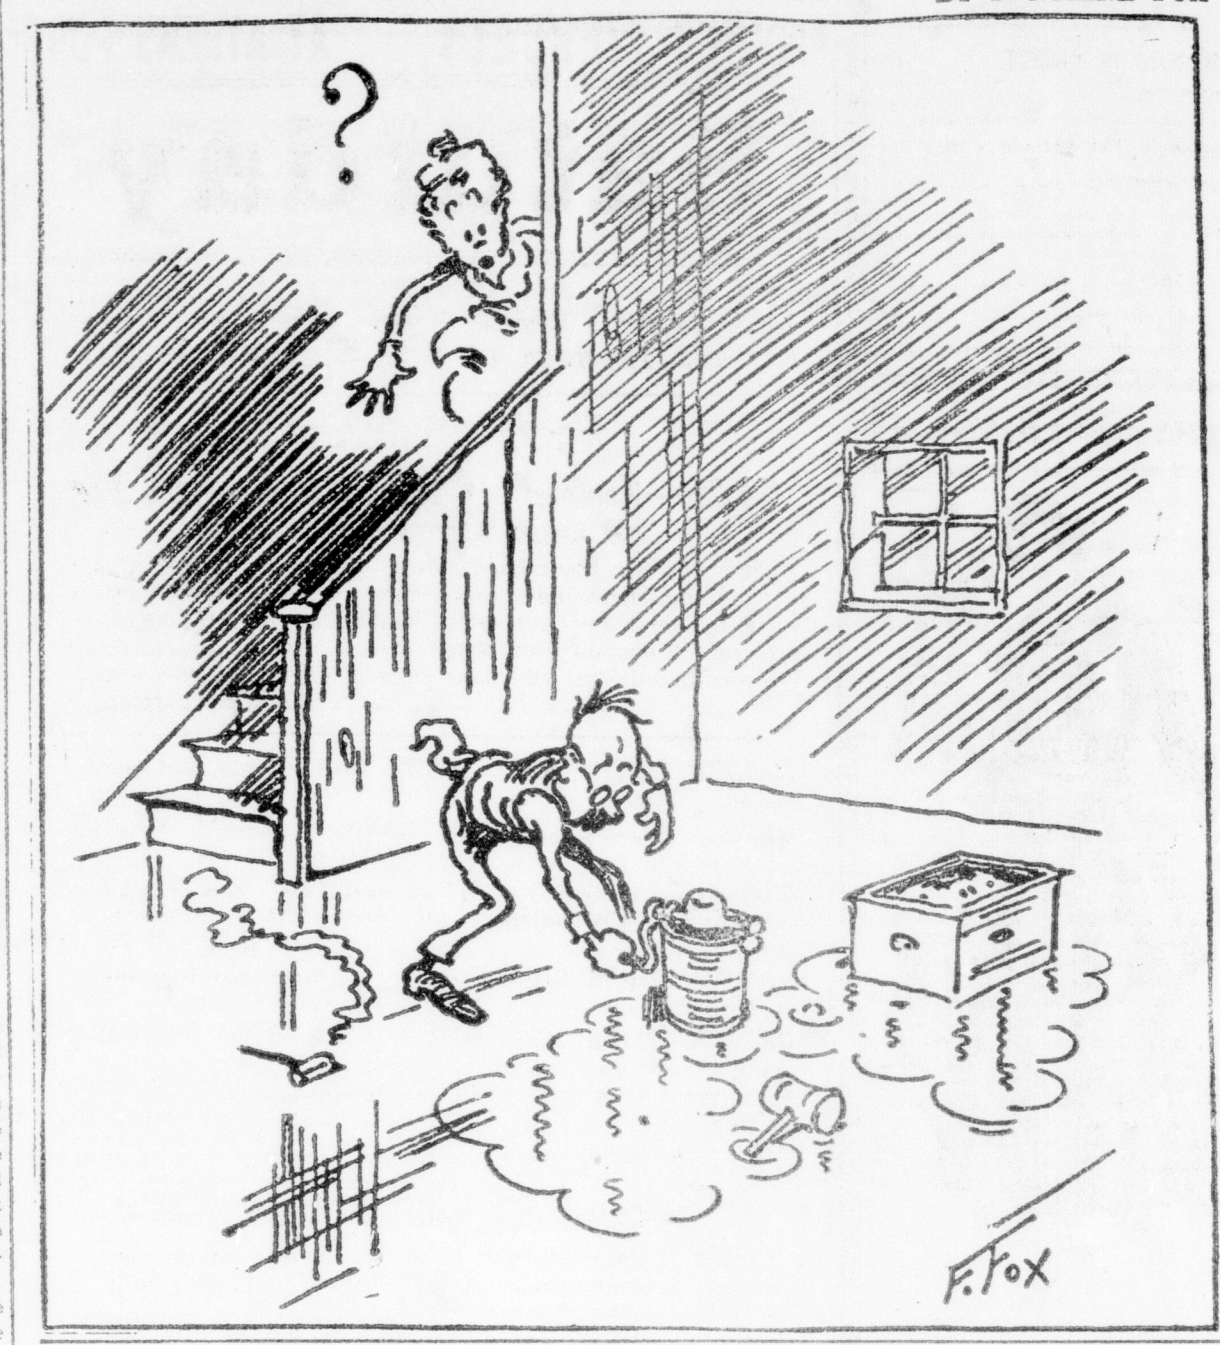

The United States has constantly some announcement to make regarding her pigmy army in Mexico. Of course, one must be in the style.

What a calamity it would be should a German sub torpedo the American vessel on which the central power ministers from Greece have taken refuge.

Intimation of the retirement of Sir W. R. Meredith as chief justice and his being succeeded by L. F. Helmuth, K.C., serves to make London stand out as the home of great lawyers. A long list of men called from the local bar to more important tasks could be compiled.

A German has to put up $140 for an American $1. As a dispatch from New York states, despite the Teuton successes in Rumania, finance does not believe Germany has a chance, and the deeper into war she gets the smaller value her money has in the world markets. If finance believed otherwise, Canadian money and securities would immediately feel the effect. There was never a better market for Canadian municipal debentures than at present. American bonds houses are writing every day in an endeavor to obtain such securities.

German lies and also American ignorance, assert that the peoples long for peace while the governments are intent on war. This is true for Germany, where the Government is not responsible to the people, but it is impossible to be true for Great Britain, Italy and France, whose governments are the people. However, it is useless to try to convince some Americans that any other government than their own is by and for the people. The ordinary American is a Rip Van Winkle who went to sleep as to foreign affairs about a day or two after the surrender of Yorktown and has not waked up yet.

$32,000,000 IN GOLD FROM RUSSIA FOR U. S.

Big Bullion Shipment Now in Transit to Morgan's New York Office.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—Gold, together with Russian and United States securities to the value of $30,000,000, which arrived here yesterday on the Japanese liner, Shinyo Maru, consigned direct from Petrograd to J. P. Morgan & Co., New York, was forwarded east today. Of this, $32,000,000 was in actual gold.

The big transfer from the Russian capital to New York explains why three prominent Russians of the bureau of finance of the Russian ministry of foreign affairs, also arrived here on the Shinyo Maru and proceeded east on the train carrying the treasure.

It is said Russia has been spending over $360,000,000 in the United States during the last twenty-five months for war munitions and railroad supplies.

VILLA SUCCESSFUL ON FIFTH ATTEMPT

EL PASO, TEXAS, Nov. 30.—Two Syrian refugees who arrived in Juneau early today on a train from Sanz, reported Villa in possession of Chihuahua City, when they left there at 4:30 o'clock Monday morning.

The refugees said Villa attacked four days and was repulsed, but returned on the fifth day, (Monday), and captured the city.

General Trevino, the refugees said, went south with a part of his command.

 A man of Herculean avoirdupois of the hobo genus type is making a detour in South Dorchester. He emerged from the bivouac of D. R. Burton this morning, musing, and eastward. He paid a visit to the apathy of William Hughes, in quest of honey in the way of desert. He capsize several hives, and departed with a consignment of comb honey. The consensus of opinion is that he had escaped from an asylum.

Two Weeks' Crusade Has Put Check On Traffic.

[Special To The Advertiser.]
 DETROIT, Nov. 30.—Collector of Internal Revenue Brady was optimistic today over work of his staff in breaking up operations of the illicit drug ring who have been operating along the Canadian frontier during the past few months. During this period many thousands of dollars worth of heroin, morphine, cocaine and coal tar derivatives have been brought into the United States from Canada and have been distributed among the members of the "dope ring" in Toledo, Cincinnati and Chicago.

For two weeks an active crusade has been going on against the drug peddlers, more than a dozen of whom have been taken into custody, while those who are still at liberty are showing wholesome respect for the law.

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.
 Philadelphia, Pa.—Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eyestrain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had them, eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. Another says, "I was almost blind, now they feel like all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used to wear glasses, after using the prescription, says, "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using the prescription for fifteen days, everything seems clear, I can even read the print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting

WELLAND CANAL WORK ORDERED DISCONTINUED

"End of Season" To See Cession of Labor on New Canal.

WELLAND, Nov. 30.—The contractors on several sections now under construction at the lower end of the new Welland ship canal have received advance notice that all work is to be discontinued at the close of the present season. As the fiscal year does not end until March 31, it is likely that will be what is meant the "end of the season," and that work must stop by that time.

DYSPEPSIA MOST DIFFICULT TO CURE BUT B. B. B. DOES IT

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much; drink too much; make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of time before dyspepsia follows. That forty-year-old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia, and will cure to stay cured, as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we receive from time to time.

Mr. Nell A. Cameron, Kiltarity, N. S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what your great medicine Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I was troubled very much with dyspepsia for the past two years. I was recommended all kinds of medicines, but they did not help me any. At last a friend advised me to try a bottle of B. B. B. I took four bottles and was totally cured. I will gladly recommend it to all sufferers."

B. B. B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BELIEVES FEDERAL CABINET WILL STOP EXPORTATION

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Hon. I. B. Mr. Lucas added that the Canadian Niagara Power Company expressed a desire to make every effort to give power to the hydro commission at the earliest possible date, but intimated that that couldn't be done until after January 1 next.

READY TO PAY FOR DUTCH SHIP CARGO

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Nov. 30.—Germany has declared to the Government of the Netherlands her readiness to pay damages for the Dutch freighter Bloemerodijk and her grain cargo, while the rest of the vessel's cargo is to be submitted to a prize court. Official announcement was made to this effect today to the Associated Press. The Bloemerodijk was sunk off Nantucket last October by a German submarine.

glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules here given. Prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. If you should notice your eyes clear up, per cent right from the start, and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take a step to stop them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. Note—Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituents are well known to eminent eye specialists, and widely prescribed by them. The many features guarantee it to strengthen weak eyes in one week's time in many instances, or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept in hand for regular use in almost every family." Standard Drug and W. T. Strong sell it.
