ANNUAL MEETING IS HELD BY HOLY NAME SOCIETY

Members Attend Early Morning Mass

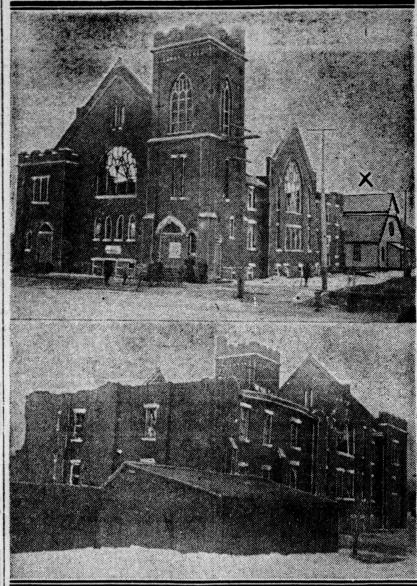

On the occasion of the annual meeting of the London Holy Name Society, an organization of the Roman Catholic Church, whose church, whose aim is to prevent profanity and the taking of the Lord's name in vain, the members attended in a body the 8:30 o'clock mass in St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday morning. They afterwards adjourned to St. Peter's Parish Hall, where breakfast was served to about 400.

Rev. Father Stanley of Woodstock, spiritual adviser of the Holy Name Societies in London Diocese, addressed are gathering at some length on the aims and work of the society. He complimented the London society on being a splendid body and on the large membership. Bishop M. F. Fallon spoke oriefly, but in complimentary terms regarding the society.

were received during the services yes-terday, and it is estimated that well over $1,000 has already been pledged toward the work of reconstruction. Offers of Assistance.

Those who worshipped with the congregation of the Egerton Street Baptist Church yesterday morning in the little old building, which was forsaken seven years ago for the beautiful new church, now utterly destroyed by the fire of Saturday morning, could not help but feel in the spirit of that worship that Christians have a different way of facing misfortune than is common to mankind—that there is a reserve of power and strength, and unfaltering faith, which sheds its radiance even in the deepest gloom. In all of the services yesterday there was not a note of complaint or rebellion or of doubt, but only a quiet acceptance of the stunning blow, and a resolve to undertake the heavy and a resolve to undertake the heavy task of restoration as quickly as possible.

"God in His providence is going to overcome what seems disaster, and quicken our faith and spiritual life into a flame which shall mount higher and burn brighter than the destructive fires in yonder church," said Rev. A. C. Bingham during the course of an inspiring sermon on the subject, "Tried by Fire," yesterday morning. In introducing his subject the pastor said had face the present situation—the new now difficult it was to adjust oneself and face the present situation—the new church, pride of their hearts and hope of their future work, lying in a heap of ruins; but that even when the fire was raging he had not shed a tear—perhaps he was too stunned—because even then he realized that it was only the outward and material which was helped determined.

lives of the people than ever.

Ready Sympathy and Help.

"But," he said, "it has brought the tears to discover how much sympathy and ready help there is in time of need. Not only among our own people, but from many outside sources have come the sympathy and offers of material assistance." He said that the Orangemen had offered their hall (the old Baptist Church), and the Presbyterian Church across the way had offered the use of part of their building, almost before the embers of the fire were cold, while the wires to his phone had been kept hot with the many expressions of sympathy and help by gifts of money, so that the work of the church might soon be restored to its full volume and usefulness once more. One of the first donations, he said, had come from a prominent Methodist layman, and there had even been telegrams from other cities—one from Calgary—to assure the church of assistance.

"There are some things which the

"There are some things which the fire cannot burn," continued Mr. Bingham, "and some things which it reveals. It tries brotherhood and benevolence, and it has astonished me to find how many friends we have. Then, some of our people have seemed cold and indifferent in the past, and the fire has warmed them up. It has burned down partitions and insulations which seemed to exist between individuals, and by the grace of God may they never be rebuilt, so that we may move forward unitedly in the work of extending Christ's kingdom.

each man's works and worth. Any who are cowards or who have been using the church for their own ends will flee from us in these days, but those who have the refined gold of Christian character will buckle on the whole armor of God. Our beautiful church has gone, but after all it is only the workshop. Our work as Christians is not only to build churches of brick and mortar, but to awaken in each heart the knowledge that we ourselves are the tabernacles of the Most High Godto convert as many mortal souls as to convert as many mortal souls as possible, so that they may be worthy call was issued on Sunday for vorkers for the Forward Movement campaign. The need of spreading Christianity was referred to by the reachers for the last time before the city will be canvassed for funds. The workers will get down to work this week and every church hopes to surpass its objective before next Sunday

In several churches the ministers spoke on the need for generous contributions to the fund. Subscriptions such as had been given in other years would not be sufficient to carry this would not be sufficient to carry this campaign over the top, it was pointed out, as the purchasing value of the dollar was not nearly so great today as in years gone by. The ministers said that the need for the Christianization of such parts of the world as had not heard of Jesus Christ was so great that people could not longer think in small figures.

Rev. W. R. McIntosh spoke at length along this line at the morning service in King Street Presbyterian Church. His text was: "Now, Concerning the Collection," using the words of the Apostle Paul as found in Corinthians, chapter xvi. Mr. McIntosh appealed to his congregation to subscribe generously to the fund. Money was considered something sacred in the Bible, and if its true value were to be realized it should be used for God's purposes.

No New Thing.

A forward movement was no new thing in the church, according to the speaker, for Paul in his day had appealed to all the churches to assist financially and morally in the spreading of the word of the Maker. The world at the present time was in need of more Christianity, and through such financially and morally in the spreading of the word of the Maker. The world at the present time was in need of more Christianity, and through such a movement as the one now launched in this city it was hoped to carry the gospel to all corners of the globe.

Mr. McIntosh said there was not sufficient Christianity in the world to prevent the war, and there was not sufficient Christianity in the world at the present time to maintain the League of Nations. He believed that only through carrying of the gospel to all parts of the world could peace be assured.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

MONEY AND THE MOVEMENT.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

The writer has recently been struck by the way in which the financial prosperity of the various churches has been emphasized. The Forward Movement, in which we are all interested, of course, appears to have millions to its credit.

One cannot enter a church without being impressed by the apparent prosperity of the members, if one can judge from the appearance of the occupants of the church.

We read of the need of the Armenians; how the men and women and children are starving by thousands. Subscriptions are started. The money baltry hundreds are collected. In the hoarding of money, were as a few paltry hundreds are collected. In the hoarding of money, were as a few paltry hundreds are collected. In the hoarding of money, were as a few paltry hundreds are collected. In the hoarding of the world could peace be assumed. Money was a part of religion and all Christians should regard it as sacred and use it for God's purposes, said Mr. McIntosh. The money to be raised in the campaign of this week would be used to uplift civilization, and those who fave would collect money on Sunday, Mr. McIntosh week would be worshipping God by giving. Referring to the fact that some churches would collect money on Sunday, Mr. McIntosh the world could peace as and use it for God's purposes, said Mr. McIntosh. The money to be raised in the campaign of this week would be used to uplift civilization, and those who fact that some churches would collect money on Sunday, Mr. McIntosh the fact that some churches would collect money on Sunday, Mr. McIntosh the sale in the campaign of this week would be worshipping God by giving. Referring to the campaign of this was cared in the campaign of toward the fund. He considered the capacity for sacrifice the supreme test of Christianity.

The hoarding of money was not approved by Paul, Mr. McIntosh said, for that apostle feared that accumulation would harden the heart and destroy the Christianity of man. Paul regarded money seriously, and for this reason spoke of it in his epistles. He had considered money as being as serious a factor in man's religion as the resurrection.

serious a factor in man's religion as the resurrection.

The Test of Reality.

Rev. Thomas S. Roy spoke on "The Church's Day of Judgment" at the morning service in Talbot Street Baptist Church. He said the Forward Movement would in a sense test the reality of the life of the church. He referred to the great work that lay before the church and the necessity of putting the Forward Movement over successfully.

able Predicament.

London's fire-fighters have responded in emergencies of many kinds, but probably never under quite such peculiar conditions as obtained in a case in which their assistance was requested—and given, of course—on Sunday night. A horse, owned by a man whose name The Advertiser was unable to learn, bolted on Wellington road, and, with a cutter trailing behind, made for the bridge over the river. The animal chose to follow the car tracks, which cross the bridge on ties laid with intervals between them. The horse's feet went through between the ties and it pittched forward, resting with its body and head at the road level and its feet resting on air below the bridge.

Three firemen, who responded to the call for assistance in rescuing the horse, spent an hour in the attempt and finally, with the help of a block and tackle, a sling under the horse's stomach and a good deal of patience, the terrified animal was hoisted to terrafirma. Its legs were badly skinned, but otherwise, so far as could be accertained, it had suffered no injury except possibly to its nervous system.
