It would not be amiss to give another demonstration of a similar character. Detachments of native soldiers from trans-Pacific countries, escorted at the beginning of their journey by the Asiatic equadron, met off this Coast by the North Pacific squadron, welcomed in the Strait by the guns at Esquimalt, landed the garrison and local militia, taken hence to Vancouver, thence across the Continent to Montreal, thence to Quebec, where ceremonies suitable to their visit to that fortress could take place, thence over the Intercolonial to Halifax, another great stronghold, and escorted to sea by the North Atlantic squadron, would be a demonstration of imperial power such as no other nation, past or present, could so much as attempt. All that is necessary to enable it to be done is for the order to be given. Everything can be got in readiness on short notice. The moral effect of such an event would be inestimable.

WATER RIGHTS.

Mr. Cotton appears to have given good deal of attention to the question of water rights and it is to be hoped will shortly have an opportunity of fully placing his views before the house. He only said enough yesterday to make every one wish that it had been within the rules of the house for him to have said more.
