competition—that it was an impossibility, those of the country and that, realizing this, it was the duty expense of our own.

If, said Mr. Willison, two rallways were found in a territory, each costing a mil-lion dollars, it was self-evident that each would have to have its set of officers, its separate machinery of administration, and to earn a profit upon its cost. Throatcutting would not pay the bills, and so a combination was made to regulate rates to a living basis. If such a combination could not be made to adjust the rates to and Coppock have been filled for the could not be made to adjust the rates to and Coppock have been filled for the time by probationists. But, said Mr. Bodwell, the mine owners can for $75,000 build a 300-ton smeiter for himself. And what chance, he would ask, would this $75,000 smelter proposition have as opposed to the smelter trust of which Mr. Ker had spoken, with its capital of $65,000,000? Was it probable that any small capitalist, by comparison, would invest his $75,000 in opposition to a trust of $75,000,000? Or if he did what were his chances in the fight?
