A Home Testimonial.

GENTLEMEN,—Two years ago my husband

HURD, 13 Cross st., Toronto.

THAT COLE NEW YEAR.

An Old Expressman Tells About It.

"The unreliability of some morning newspapers makes an open winter chilly," said an old expressman this morning. "I'm the oldest expressman in Detroit, and if they wanted the truth why didn't they come to me? I'm pretty well known, I think. The year that other expressmen told about the farming stage driver makes me sick.
He's always getting big stories out of small rumors just like some newspapers that I know of."

"Now the facts of that little matter were these: 'The stage driver was driving from Farmington—No, lemme see? No, he was driving from Watford, because I was coming in with the load of straw. All of a sudden he off his horse. The driver hit him a lick with the whip and he didn't budge. He gave him another and it was likewise. It was pretty cold and the driver began to rouse up to his work. He chewed and when he was in a tight place he had a habit of chewing his teeth. In doing it he found the chew was frozen hard as a walnut. He spit it out and it bounded up and rolled into the ditch. He looked at the horse, but the horse staid there. Then he got off and tried to lead him, but the horse wouldn't lead.
Barnyard boys got out and offered advice. A big fellow said any bally billy could be started by twisting his tail and the driver told him to twist. The big fellow, who looked as if he could knock an ox down with his fist, tried to twist the horse's tail, but got tired and said he wasn't strong enough. A little passenger told the big fellow that in Vermont they always twist a balky horse's ear, and when the big fellow got rested, he tried that and broke the horse's ear off close to his head. Just then I came along with the load of straw and somebody said if you lighted a little straw under a balky horse he'd go. I told 'em they might have all the straw they wanted, I got down and they took an armful of straw and blazed it up under the horse. I was standing at the horse's head and I thought I noticed that he winked a little. But he didn't budge. I spit a little tobacco juice in his eye and he didn't wink."

"Sure enough, he was frozen to death and when the harness was taken off him and we all pushed him over he struck like a stone hoss with wooden legs. I hitched up my hoss with the stage hoss and we drove the passengers in. Now that's all there is in that, and the stage driver is alive today.
Yes, it was a pretty cold New Year's in '64, but then it wasn't half as cold as I've seen it."
