

Jewellery, &c. received an assortment of
JEWELLERY, CUTLERY,
SILVER, &c. &c.
Articles,
be sold low for cash
Jewellery,
PAIRED AND CLEANED
S. and GLASSES,
adjusted and touched.
diamonds, repaired, cleaned.

GEO. F. SUICENEY

PORK, &c.
be sent from New York
Extra
New York Mess Pork,
Extra
J. W. WETMORE

LET
now occupied by Mr. W.
nine miles from St.
Mines, Mr. D. McCallum
of this Paper
MICHAEL TURNER
Frederick

AIL STAGE,
ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

ST. STEPHEN
AND BARRING
has contracted to
ST. ANDREW
MILLTOWN,
as a week, according
ment, viz:
travels on Monday
days, at 6 o'clock.

The Standard,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY, BY
A. W. Smith.
At his Office, Water Street, Saint Andrews, N. B.
TERMS:
12s. 6d. per annum—if paid in advance.
15s. if not paid until the end of the year.
ADVERTISEMENTS
Inserted according to written orders, or continued till ordered, if no written directions.
First Insertion of 12 lines and under 3s.
Each repetition of 12 lines 1s.
First Insertion of all over 12 lines 3d. per line.
Each repetition of 12 lines 1d. per line.
Advertising by the year may be agreed on.

No 621 SAINT ANDREWS, N. B., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1850. [Vol. 18]

THE GOLDEN COIN;
OR THE LITTLE STREET BEGGAR.
A Story of "Happy New Year."
BY GEORGE C. HILL.

It was the morning of a bright new year
that had just set in, bright, golden, and beautiful. The snow glittered like jewelled raindrops in the cloudless sun. The chiming of the silver sounds of the bells struck joyfully upon the listener in every street. The air was cold, though not piercing; bracing, though not biting—just cold enough, in truth,
to infuse life and elasticity into one that moved.

There was a little girl, a child of poverty,
on that beautiful New Year's morning, walking the streets with gay crowds that swept past her. Her little feet had grown numb, encased only in thin shoes, and those badly worn, that she could but with difficulty move one before the other. Her cheeks shone at every step she took, and her lips looked truly purple. Alas! poor little girl! She was a little beggar.

Just like the old year was the new year to her. Just like the last year's wants and sufferings were the wants and sufferings of this! The change of the year brought no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.

In the old and cheerless room glomed no bright fires of anniversary. No evergreens, no flowers, save a few withered ones, decked her tiny stained walls. There was no sound of merry voices within the door, no satisfaction of a happy New Year to you, Mrs. Gray! Heaven seemed to have forgotten her and her abode out from the happiness of that festive day.

That was all the world's on that festive day of the year. It had provided, to all appearance, no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.

Little Elsie stopped at times and breathed
her hot breath upon her blue and benumbed fingers, and stamping her tiny feet in their cageyments with all the force left in them;
and then big tears stood trembling in her large blue eyes for a moment and rolled down her purple cheeks, as if they would freeze to death. She had left her mother in bed, sick, exhausted, and famishing! What wonder that she cried; even though those hot tears only dropped on the icy pavement. They might as well fall there as elsewhere; the many human hearts that passed her were full as ice and hardened.

She would have turned back to go home,
but she thought again of her poor mother and went on, though where to go she knew not.
She was to become a street beggar! Where would street beggars go? What streets are left out and named and numbered for them?
Surely, if not home, then where should they go? It was this thought that brought those tears—tears that started those deep and impressive wrinkles that etched her infant utterance.

A young boy—a bright looking little fellow—chanced to pass her as she wept and stopped. He caught the glimmer of those tears in the sunshine, and the sight smote his angel heart. He knew not what want and suffering were. He had never known them—himself—never once heard of them—knew not what a real beggar was. He stopped suddenly before Elsie, and asked her the cause of those tears. She could make him no reply—her heart was too full.

"Has any body hurt you?" asked the feeling
little fellow.
She shook her head negatively.
"Have you lost your way?" he persisted.
"No," answered the child quite audibly.
"What is the matter, then?" he asked.
"Mother is poor and sick, and I am cold and hungry. We have nothing to eat. Our room is quite cold, and there is no wood for us. Oh you do not know all—you cannot know all."

"But I will," replied the boy manly. "Where do you live?"
"Yes; let me go with you," said he; "show
me the way."

Through street, lane and alley, she guided
him. They reached the door of her hovel.
The cold breath of the wind whistled in at the cracks and crevices and key-hole before them, as if taunting them in. They entered.
A sick woman feebly raised her head from the pillow and gave her a sweet smile. "Elie, have you come?" she faintly said.

"Yes, mother," answered the child; "and I have brought this boy with me. I do not know who he is, but he said he wanted to come and see where we lived. Did I do wrong to bring him, mother?"

"No, my child, if he knows how to pity you from his little heart. But he cannot pity me yet—he is not old enough."
The bright-faced sunny-hearted boy gazed in astonishment upon the mother and child.

The Standard,

OR RAILWAY AND COMMERCIAL RECORD

Ex aris sumendum est optimum.—Cic.

No 621 SAINT ANDREWS, N. B., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1850. [Vol. 18]

THE GOLDEN COIN;
OR THE LITTLE STREET BEGGAR.
A Story of "Happy New Year."
BY GEORGE C. HILL.

It was the morning of a bright new year
that had just set in, bright, golden, and beautiful. The snow glittered like jewelled raindrops in the cloudless sun. The chiming
of the silver sounds of the bells struck joyfully upon the listener in every street. The air was cold, though not piercing; bracing,
though not biting—just cold enough, in truth,
to infuse life and elasticity into one that
moved.

There was a little girl, a child of poverty,
on that beautiful New Year's morning, walking the streets with gay crowds that swept past her. Her little feet had grown numb, encased only in thin shoes, and those badly worn, that she could but with difficulty move
one before the other. Her cheeks shone at every step she took, and her lips looked truly purple. Alas! poor little girl! She was a little beggar.

Just like the old year was the new year to her. Just like the last year's wants and sufferings were the wants and sufferings of this! The change of the year brought no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.

In the old and cheerless room glomed no
bright fires of anniversary. No evergreens, no flowers, save a few withered ones, decked
her tiny stained walls. There was no sound of merry voices within the door, no satisfaction of a happy New Year to you, Mrs. Gray! Heaven seemed to have forgotten her and her abode out from the happiness of that festive day.

That was all the world's on that festive day
of the year. It had provided, to all appearance, no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.

Little Elsie stopped at times and breathed
her hot breath upon her blue and benumbed
fingers, and stamping her tiny feet in their
cageyments with all the force left in them;
and then big tears stood trembling in her large
blue eyes for a moment and rolled down her purple cheeks, as if they would freeze to death. She had left her mother in bed, sick, exhausted, and famishing! What wonder
that she cried; even though those hot tears
only dropped on the icy pavement. They might as well fall there as elsewhere; the many human hearts that passed her were full
as ice and hardened.

She would have turned back to go home,
but she thought again of her poor mother and
went on, though where to go she knew not.
She was to become a street beggar! Where would street beggars go? What streets are left out and named and numbered for them?
Surely, if not home, then where should they go? It was this thought that brought those
tears—tears that started those deep and impressive wrinkles that etched her infant utterance.

A young boy—a bright looking little fellow—chanced to pass her as she wept and stopped. He caught the glimmer of those tears
in the sunshine, and the sight smote his angel heart. He knew not what want and suffering were. He had never known them—
himself—never once heard of them—knew
not what a real beggar was. He stopped suddenly before Elsie, and asked her the cause of those tears. She could make him
no reply—her heart was too full.

"Has any body hurt you?" asked the feeling
little fellow.
She shook her head negatively.
"Have you lost your way?" he persisted.
"No," answered the child quite audibly.
"What is the matter, then?" he asked.
"Mother is poor and sick, and I am cold and hungry. We have nothing to eat. Our room is quite cold, and there is no wood for us. Oh you do not know all—you cannot know all."

"But I will," replied the boy manly. "Where
do you live?"
"Yes; let me go with you," said he; "show
me the way."

Through street, lane and alley, she guided
him. They reached the door of her hovel.
The cold breath of the wind whistled in at
the cracks and crevices and key-hole before them, as if taunting them in. They entered.
A sick woman feebly raised her head from
the pillow and gave her a sweet smile. "Elie, have you come?" she faintly said.

"Yes, mother," answered the child; "and I have brought this boy with me. I do not know who he is, but he said he wanted to come and see where we lived. Did I do wrong
to bring him, mother?"

"No, my child, if he knows how to pity you
from his little heart. But he cannot pity me
yet—he is not old enough."
The bright-faced sunny-hearted boy gazed
in astonishment upon the mother and child.

THE GOLDEN COIN;
OR THE LITTLE STREET BEGGAR.
A Story of "Happy New Year."
BY GEORGE C. HILL.

It was the morning of a bright new year
that had just set in, bright, golden, and beautiful. The snow glittered like jewelled raindrops in the cloudless sun. The chiming
of the silver sounds of the bells struck joyfully upon the listener in every street. The air was cold, though not piercing; bracing,
though not biting—just cold enough, in truth,
to infuse life and elasticity into one that
moved.

There was a little girl, a child of poverty,
on that beautiful New Year's morning, walking the streets with gay crowds that swept past her. Her little feet had grown numb, encased only in thin shoes, and those badly
worn, that she could but with difficulty move
one before the other. Her cheeks shone at every step she took, and her lips looked truly purple. Alas! poor little girl! She was a little beggar.

Just like the old year was the new year to her. Just like the last year's wants and sufferings were the wants and sufferings of this! The change of the year brought no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.

In the old and cheerless room glomed no
bright fires of anniversary. No evergreens, no flowers, save a few withered ones, decked
her tiny stained walls. There was no sound of merry voices within the door, no satisfaction of a happy New Year to you, Mrs. Gray! Heaven seemed to have forgotten her and her abode out from the happiness of that festive day.

That was all the world's on that festive day
of the year. It had provided, to all appearance, no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.

LAW RESPECTING NEWSPAPERS.

Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.
If subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publisher may continue to send them till all arrears are paid.
If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible till they have sent their Bill, and ordered their papers to be discontinued.
If subscribers remove to other places, without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

No 621 SAINT ANDREWS, N. B., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1850. [Vol. 18]

THE GOLDEN COIN;
OR THE LITTLE STREET BEGGAR.
A Story of "Happy New Year."
BY GEORGE C. HILL.

It was the morning of a bright new year
that had just set in, bright, golden, and beautiful. The snow glittered like jewelled raindrops in the cloudless sun. The chiming
of the silver sounds of the bells struck joyfully upon the listener in every street. The air was cold, though not piercing; bracing,
though not biting—just cold enough, in truth,
to infuse life and elasticity into one that
moved.

There was a little girl, a child of poverty,
on that beautiful New Year's morning, walking the streets with gay crowds that swept past her. Her little feet had grown numb, encased only in thin shoes, and those badly
worn, that she could but with difficulty move
one before the other. Her cheeks shone at every step she took, and her lips looked truly purple. Alas! poor little girl! She was a little beggar.

Just like the old year was the new year to her. Just like the last year's wants and sufferings were the wants and sufferings of this! The change of the year brought no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.

In the old and cheerless room glomed no
bright fires of anniversary. No evergreens, no flowers, save a few withered ones, decked
her tiny stained walls. There was no sound of merry voices within the door, no satisfaction of a happy New Year to you, Mrs. Gray! Heaven seemed to have forgotten her and her abode out from the happiness of that festive day.

That was all the world's on that festive day
of the year. It had provided, to all appearance, no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.

Little Elsie stopped at times and breathed
her hot breath upon her blue and benumbed
fingers, and stamping her tiny feet in their
cageyments with all the force left in them;
and then big tears stood trembling in her large
blue eyes for a moment and rolled down her purple cheeks, as if they would freeze to death. She had left her mother in bed, sick, exhausted, and famishing! What wonder
that she cried; even though those hot tears
only dropped on the icy pavement. They might as well fall there as elsewhere; the many human hearts that passed her were full
as ice and hardened.

She would have turned back to go home,
but she thought again of her poor mother and
went on, though where to go she knew not.
She was to become a street beggar! Where would street beggars go? What streets are left out and named and numbered for them?
Surely, if not home, then where should they go? It was this thought that brought those
tears—tears that started those deep and impressive wrinkles that etched her infant utterance.

A young boy—a bright looking little fellow—chanced to pass her as she wept and stopped. He caught the glimmer of those tears
in the sunshine, and the sight smote his angel heart. He knew not what want and suffering were. He had never known them—
himself—never once heard of them—knew
not what a real beggar was. He stopped suddenly before Elsie, and asked her the cause of those tears. She could make him
no reply—her heart was too full.

"Has any body hurt you?" asked the feeling
little fellow.
She shook her head negatively.
"Have you lost your way?" he persisted.
"No," answered the child quite audibly.
"What is the matter, then?" he asked.
"Mother is poor and sick, and I am cold and hungry. We have nothing to eat. Our room is quite cold, and there is no wood for us. Oh you do not know all—you cannot know all."

"But I will," replied the boy manly. "Where
do you live?"
"Yes; let me go with you," said he; "show
me the way."

Through street, lane and alley, she guided
him. They reached the door of her hovel.
The cold breath of the wind whistled in at
the cracks and crevices and key-hole before them, as if taunting them in. They entered.
A sick woman feebly raised her head from
the pillow and gave her a sweet smile. "Elie, have you come?" she faintly said.

"Yes, mother," answered the child; "and I have brought this boy with me. I do not know who he is, but he said he wanted to come and see where we lived. Did I do wrong
to bring him, mother?"

"No, my child, if he knows how to pity you
from his little heart. But he cannot pity me
yet—he is not old enough."
The bright-faced sunny-hearted boy gazed
in astonishment upon the mother and child.

THE GOLDEN COIN;
OR THE LITTLE STREET BEGGAR.
A Story of "Happy New Year."
BY GEORGE C. HILL.

It was the morning of a bright new year
that had just set in, bright, golden, and beautiful. The snow glittered like jewelled raindrops in the cloudless sun. The chiming
of the silver sounds of the bells struck joyfully upon the listener in every street. The air was cold, though not piercing; bracing,
though not biting—just cold enough, in truth,
to infuse life and elasticity into one that
moved.

There was a little girl, a child of poverty,
on that beautiful New Year's morning, walking the streets with gay crowds that swept past her. Her little feet had grown numb, encased only in thin shoes, and those badly
worn, that she could but with difficulty move
one before the other. Her cheeks shone at every step she took, and her lips looked truly purple. Alas! poor little girl! She was a little beggar.

Just like the old year was the new year to her. Just like the last year's wants and sufferings were the wants and sufferings of this! The change of the year brought no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.

In the old and cheerless room glomed no
bright fires of anniversary. No evergreens, no flowers, save a few withered ones, decked
her tiny stained walls. There was no sound of merry voices within the door, no satisfaction of a happy New Year to you, Mrs. Gray! Heaven seemed to have forgotten her and her abode out from the happiness of that festive day.

That was all the world's on that festive day
of the year. It had provided, to all appearance, no change in her condition with it. She was poor; her mother was a widow and an invalid, and the child was a poor beggar.