TEAL TEAL Many a mother who would not beat a child feels free to scold on any and all occasions; and between a scolding mother and a beating mother, the scolding mother is generally considered the model one. This is far from the case; a whipping many times has good results, but a scolding never.

A Lounge Wrap.

Everyone knows how necessary it is to have a shawl or wrap of some kind on the lounge, and yet how annoying such a thing can make itself when it will get in a tumble and somebody "drops in." Most of us have material about our houses to make a very suitable rug for the lounge that will keep papa or Johnnic from a severe cold, and yet will look as if it belonged there, even though it is thrown down in a heap. Crochet all the odds and ends of bright worsted into hit-and-miss stripes, two yards long and eight inches wide; or, if you wish a better thing, make these strips of new yarn, in patterns, which can be procured at any store where materials for fancy work are kept. Make at least five such strips, and combine them with strips of plush, woolen crazy work, odds and ends of silk, or even some pretty but cheap lace bunting of harmonizing shade. Line with the acting and the other a very bald head and the other a very wiswell" young fellow with a great crop of red hair, whose fiery hue would outrival the settings sun. When they had passed Paisley most of ethe travellers had laid down their newspapers and begun to yawn and look out lazily, waiting the arrival of the train at their destination. Tiring of this prosaic silence the young man with the red hair selected the old man as the butt of his wit.

"I say, old fellow," he remarked rudely, "nature surely had no hair in stock when you were made?"

"She had, sir, she had," replied the old man; "but it was red and I would not have any of it." Collapse of red hair, whose fiery hue would outrival the settings sun.
